COOLIDGE SEES OWNERSHIP OF RAILS BURDEN

Says That It Would Cause a Tax Increase on Farmers Up to 40 Per Cent

IS AN ENCROACHMENT

Uneconomic and Not Consistent with Nation's Principles, He Declares

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—Proposals for government ownership of railroads and other public utilities were denounced here last night by President Coolidge as "uneconomic" and "encroachments upon our rights."

Speaking at exercises commemorating the 15th anniversary of the meeting of the First Continental Congress, Mr. Coolidge also renewed his assault on suggestions to limit the power of the Supreme Court and urged that the people resist encroachment upon their rights and liberties guaranteed by the Constitution.

"If we wish to maintain what our fathers have established," he declared, "we shall do well to leave the people in the ownership of their property, in control of their government and under the protection of their courts."

It is difficult, the President said, referring to government ownership of railroads, "to reconcile the American ideal of a sovereign people capable of owning and managing their own government with an ability to own and manage their own business."

Furthermore, he declared, it would mean a loss in public revenue estimated at $600,000,000 a year, with a resultant increase in the tax on farmers of from THREE to FORTY per cent.

Early History

Mr. Coolidge devoted most of his address to a discussion of early history of this country and the birth of the Constitution after the organization of the First Continental Congress.

Referring to the deliberations of this Congress, the President asserted that, "if we could better understand what they said and did to establish our free institutions, we should be less likely to be misled by the misrepresentations and distorted arguments of the hour and be far better equipped to maintain them."

Coolidge Also to Have Personal Conference With Man Making Charges

Washington, Sept. 26.—President Coolidge has turned over to Attorney-General Stone for investigation the charges of the Law Enforcement League of Philadelphia that there is "political corruption all down the line in Pennsylvania by federal office holders."

The charges were made in a message to the President by William R. Nicholson, Jr., secretary of the League, in which the President was asked to intervene in the controversy between Mayor Kendrick and his Director of Public Safety, Brigadier-General Smedley D. Butler.

Mr. Coolidge has given no indication that he will intervene in this controversy.

The charges made by the League, however, were given consideration today, and placed in the hands of the Department of Justice with an accompanying letter.

Attorney-General Stone immediately telegraphed William R. Nicholson, Jr. asking that responsible officers of the League confer with him relative to charges made by Mr. Nicholson.

Mr. Stone announced that he was making a thorough investigation of the complaint and is prepared to take such appropriate action as the facts may warrant. Meanwhile he added, he is awaiting the conference with the officers of the League.

RUSSIA HOLDS OUT HANDS TO UNITED STATES

Foreign Minister's Reply To Hughes Is Interpreted as Conciliatory

SEEKS COMMON BASIS

Expresses Belief That Difference Separating Nations Can Be Composed

Moscow, Sept. 26.—(By the A. P.)—All the facts indicate that a compromise between the interests of the United States and the Russian Soviet government is to be desired and that it is quite within reach, Foreign Minister Tchitcherine of Russia declared today in a belated reply to the pronouncement of American policy towards Russia made by Secretary of State Hughes.

The Russian foreign secretary, in a carefully prepared 2,500 word interview with the Rosta agency, bristling with argumentation but marked by polite but emphatic language, set forth the Russian point of view on the Russo-American relations, and, according to the interpretation placed on the declaration by many persons here, held out the olive branch to the United States.

"From the fact that the Soviet government serves the interests of the laboring masses and the government of Secretary of State Hughes serves the interests of American capitalists," the foreign minister said, "it does not follow that a compromise between the two governments is not possible. On the contrary, all the facts in the case indicate that a compromise is to be desired and that it is within reach."

Concerning Russia's debt to the United States, the Russian foreign minister said his government had already offered to negotiate with Washington regarding this question.

Both Coolidge and LaFollette Forces File Sets of Electoral Candidates

The name of William Lemke as a candidate for Governor as a "LaFollette-Wheeler Progressive" remained on file in the office of the Secretary of State today. Petitions bearing more than the required 300 names were filed late yesterday, in spite of Mr. Lemke's statement that he would not be a candidate and would withdraw. He has until 30 days before election, or October 5, to withdraw.

No additional filings for office were recorded today, from petitions mailed yesterday, the official last day for filing petitions for nomination in the November 4, election. There are expected to be changes in the present complexion of the ballot, however. The action of the supreme court on four alleged LaFollette electors whose names from the Coolidge column is asked, possible withdrawal by Lemke and two Democratic candidates, Miss Lillian Gabelman, nominee for Secretary of State, and J. H. McCoy nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, with possible withdrawal of Coolidge electors now in the independent column, dependent on the action of the supreme court.

The name of William Lemke of Fargo, former Attorney-General, was placed in nomination for Governor of North Dakota to be voted on in the November 4 election, as a "LaFollette-Wheeler Progressive" by the filing of petitions bearing more than 300 signatures, with the Secretary of State at 4:25 p. m. yesterday. The petitions were presented by O. A. Hall of Fargo and Marjorie Cook of Jamestown.

The filing was made regardless of newspaper statements quoting Lemke to the effect that he would withdraw if his name was filed.

"I was instructed by a conference at Jamestown to file these," Mr. Cook said over the long-distance phone to another Nonpartisan League in Grand Forks, "and I shall file them. The responsibility will rest with Mr. Lemke."

Mr. Cook said that on the basis of Mr. Lemke's statement yesterday it was understood that he would accept for nomination.

LAFOLLETTE TO MAKE SWING OF ENTIRE NATION

Senator Decides Upon Trip Carrying His Fight For Votes to Many States

Washington, Sept. 26.—Senator Robert M. LaFollette, independent presidential candidate, has decided definitely to make a swing across the continent, carrying his fight for votes in at least a score of states before the close of the campaign. The Senator's itinerary will carry him into the middle west, on through the Northwest and into Pacific Coast states. He intends to wage warfare with particular vigor in California, where electors pledged to him have been ruled off the ballot, forcing his supporters to vote for electors listed under the Socialist party designation. Cities in Minnesota and in the Northwestern states fringing the Canadian border will be visited.

BERLIN SEES BIG DIRIGIBLE

ZR-3, Built for America, Given Great Greeting

Berlin, Sept. 26.—Not since the mobilization day of 1914 have the streets of Berlin witnessed such an outbreak of patriotic enthusiasm as that which greeted the ZR-3 when the giant dirigible set off against an early pale, gray sky, majestically floated into view of the multitude, which jammed the streets, public squares and house tops of every section of the capital.

From soon after dawn the crowds had been gathering, awaiting a chance to greet the great airship built by the Zeppelin works for the United States Navy, to which it will be consigned after a trans-Atlantic flight to Lakehurst, New Jersey.

As the dirigible came into sight, a million kerchiefs fluttered greetings which were returned by Dr. Hugo Eckener, director of the Zeppelin company and his crew.

Hold Up Certificates

The certifications of nomination will not be dispatched from the Secretary of State's office, in all probability, until after the supreme court on September 29 hears the case in which an effort is made by Coolidge forces to oust four Republican electors, who are declared favorable to LaFollette. The electors, nominated by petition by the Coolidge forces, it was explained by E. T. Burke of Bismarck, are the same as those the court is asked to place in the Republican column, and should a victory be won in court the Coolidge electors would be in the Republican column and would be removed from the individual nominations column.

There is outwardly no change in the situation with respect to these electors. R. W. Frazier, chairman of the Republican state committee (Continued on page 8)

FORMER HEAD OF BIG EQUITY CO-OP COMES BACK TO FARM IN NO. DAKOTA, SEES FARMING AS PAYING BUSINESS

St. Paul, Sept. 26. J. M. Anderson, former head of the Equity Co-operative exchange, has gone back to "the life."

So he characterizes his return to his farm near Tokio, N. D., from which he has been absent for 15 years while piloting the co-operative grain marketing movement in the northwest to success.

Mr. Anderson moved on his farm early this month, with his family, and was there in time to get his finger in the threshing. He left St. Paul last night after spending a few days here on a business trip.

Believes Farming Sound

In speaking of his return to farming, he declared that that pursuit today offers the best prospect of any open to a man of moderate means.

"With live pork selling at 10 cents, beef at the same, wool at 30 to 40 cents a pound, lamb at from 12 to 15 cents, butterfat upwards of 50 cents, wheat, rye, barley and corn over or close to $1," he said, "prices are so much better today than when I last farmed, that there is no comparison."

"I can see no reason why farming should not be the best paying business into which a man can get."

Mr. Anderson is farming three quarter sections, and as an example of how the farmer can easily make a living, declared that two cows on his farm alone produce the money with which to pay his grocery and fuel bills.

He had to admit, however, that after a day and a half of threshing, when he pitched bundles to help out on a shortage of men, for a time at least, the farm life did not appear so rosy. After 15 years, he wasn't as tough to that kind of labor as he was in the old days, and the result was sore muscles too numerous to mention, and a lame back, he says.

Gives Children Advantage

"Besides the desire to get back to the farm for myself," he said last night before he left, "I wanted my children to have the advantage of a country life education. I believe they will be healthier, happier, and better citizens from living in the country."

"It's wonderful to be out there again," he declared, "away from the noise and bustle of the city. I feel sorry for those boys over there in the big buildings, who have to jump at the whistle and hurry their work with the threat of discharge forever over them. I feel sorry for them, always between walls, and where they don't get the fresh air."

"I wouldn't trade back again now for the finest job in the city."

Five women were among the 15 killed. The bandits disconnected the rails, causing the locomotive and 10 coaches and baggage car to jump the track. With the exception of the three last coaches the entire train, which was traveling at high speed, was completely wrecked. The engineer, fireman and conductor being instantly killed.

YOUTHS STEAL FROM CARS IN CITY STREETS

Plead Guilty and Are Given Sentences in the County Jail Here

Two young men who came into the North Dakota harvest fields will spend thirty days in jail here, and must also pay fines of $10 and costs assessed by Police Magistrate W. C. Cashman last night, after they pleaded guilty to petit larceny. Two others with them, who turned State's evidence, were liberated.

The men stole several articles of clothing, chiefly from automobiles parked on Main street in Bismarck, and ownership of all the clothing has not yet been determined. The goods recovered include a man's sheep-lined coat, a rain coat, a lady's sheep-lined coat, a blanket and two shirts, the latter being stolen off a clothes-line.

Alleged to have stolen a coat near Braddock, where they were working, the authorities there detained them and called Sheriff Hedstrom and Chief of Police Martenson. Anderson K. Rogers, 22, and Rudolph C. Rogers, 27, both of West Virginia, confessed, pleaded guilty and were sentenced. Hal Everett, 22, and Paul Fish, 22, with them, did not steal but remained in a car while the others did, according to testimony. They were released. The four came to Bismarck on rainy days, in Fish's automobile, when threshing was prevented.

NATION'S CAPITAL BUBBLING OVER WITH ENTHUSIASM FOR BALL TEAM

The celebration, which President Coolidge has promised to revive, bids fair to be so large that a half will be called on en masse.

PUT MEASURE ON BALLOT FOR VOTE ON NOV. 4

County Commissioners, in Resolution, Submit Bond Issue of $300,000

LACK VAULT SPACE

Resolution Recites That Bank Examiner Calls Attention To Defects

Voters of Burleigh county will on November 4 cast their ballots on the question of building a new $300,000 courthouse.

The county commissioners, in meeting here adopted a resolution putting the question of whether or not bonds shall be issued for the purpose of constructing a new courthouse and jail.

The resolution recites that the deputy bank examiner has called attention to inadequate protection of important records against fire, in the present courthouse.

The main part of the Burleigh County Courthouse is one of the oldest buildings in the city. Two wings were added to it. The resolution of the board of county commissioners is as follows:

"Whereas, many citizens have expressed a desire to have the question of building and constructing a new courthouse and jail submitted to the people of Burleigh county by a popular vote at the coming regular general election,

"And Whereas, this matter has been brought to our attention by the Bank Examiner, Mr. Gilbert Semington, and Mr. Herman Scheffer, deputy Bank Examiner, by his report, which is as follows:

"Your Examiner feels in duty bound to call attention to the inadequate protection of the important records and against fire hazard, the vaults, excepting the one of the County Auditor, being too small, poorly constructed and inadequate, and not of sufficient space to admit of a proper system of filing, for ready reference, a condition which is getting more serious from day to day and which must be met, sooner or later. The building itself is entirely too small, poorly constructed, out of date, poorly lighted and ventilated, and seemingly not fit for human occupancy, from a sanitary standpoint, to say nothing of the comfort of the public, or expediting the transaction of business with them, owing to the lack of county and lobby space."

"And Whereas, this Board considers the present courthouse and jail inadequate for the needs of the business of Burleigh County, and unsafe and unsanitary, and that it is for the best interests of the county to issue bonds to aid in such construction, which expenditure will be greater than can be provided by the annual tax levy.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the question of construction of a new courthouse and jail be submitted to a vote of the county at the coming general election, and that they give notices thereof, as provided by law. The notice to specify the amount to be raised and the precise purpose for which it is to be expended, the question submitted to the people to be as follows:

"Whether or not a courthouse and jail shall be constructed; at the sum of $300,000 be raised by the issuing of bonds for that purpose; bonds to run for 10 years, at a rate of interest not to exceed 5 per cent per annum; and a tax to be levied for 10 years to pay said bonds and interest in addition to the usual taxes required to be levied; the amount of taxes to be $30,000 per year, but not to exceed 3 mills on the dollar on the assessed valuation of the county in any one year."

WRECKS TRAIN TO GET THRILL

Police Arrest Youth For Wrecking Rock Island Train

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 26.—William Chatterton, 15, today confessed to the wrecking of the Golden State Limited on the Rock Island line at Fairport, Iowa, last night, causing derailment of three sleepers and the injuring of a number of passengers. The boy removed bolts from the switch and caused the car truck to divide. He did it, he said, "just to see the cars pile up."

The boy is under arrest. The three derailed cars bumped along on the ties when they left the rail but did not turn over.

The damage to the tracks, however, required six hours repair work before the limited got under way again.

The chief of police of Muscatine, Iowa, was passing in his automobile and saw the derangement. He found young Chatterton at the scene and arrested him. The youth, according to railway officials, is not believed to be mentally normal.

Referring to the deliberations of this Congress, the President asserted that, "if we could better understand what they said and did to establish our free institutions, we should be less likely to be misled by the misrepresentation and distortion of arguments of the hour and be far better equipped to maintain them."

He drew a lesson from the declarations of Congress as showing the "superiority of moderation and candor over violence and deceit in seeking a solution of difficult public questions."

The Constitution, Mr. Coolidge pointed out, is a device for maintaining in perpetuity the rights of the people, with the ultimate extinction of all privileged classes.

"I have mentioned the desirability," he continued, "for the people to keep control of their own government and their own property because I believe that is one of the American ideals of public welfare in harmony with the efforts of the first Continental Congress. They object to small infractions, which would destroy great principles of liberty. Unless we can maintain the integrity of the courts where the individual can secure his rights, any kind of tyranny may follow. If the people lose control of the arteries of trade and the natural sources of mechanical power, the nationalization of all industries could soon be expected. Our forefathers were alert to resist all encroachments upon their rights. If we wish to maintain our rights we can do no less. Through the breaking down of the power of the courts lies an easy way to the confiscation of the property and the destruction of the liberty of the individual. With railways and electrical utilities under political control the domination of a group would be so firmly entrenched in the whole direction of our government that the privilege of citizenship for the rest of the people would consist largely in the payment of taxes. The right to escape from any such condition through the guarantees of our Constitution. They put their faith in a free republic. If we wish to maintain what they established, we shall do well to leave the people in the ownership of their property, in control of their government and under the protection of their courts. By a resolute determination to resist all these encroachments we can best show our reverence and appreciation for the men and the work of the first Continental Congress."

First Congress Aim
Declaring it significant that the First Congress "resulted from the voluntary effort on the part of the people to redress their own grievances and remedy their own wrongs," Mr. Coolidge warned that "we pay too little attention to the reserve power of the people to take care of themselves; that we are too solicitous for government intervention."

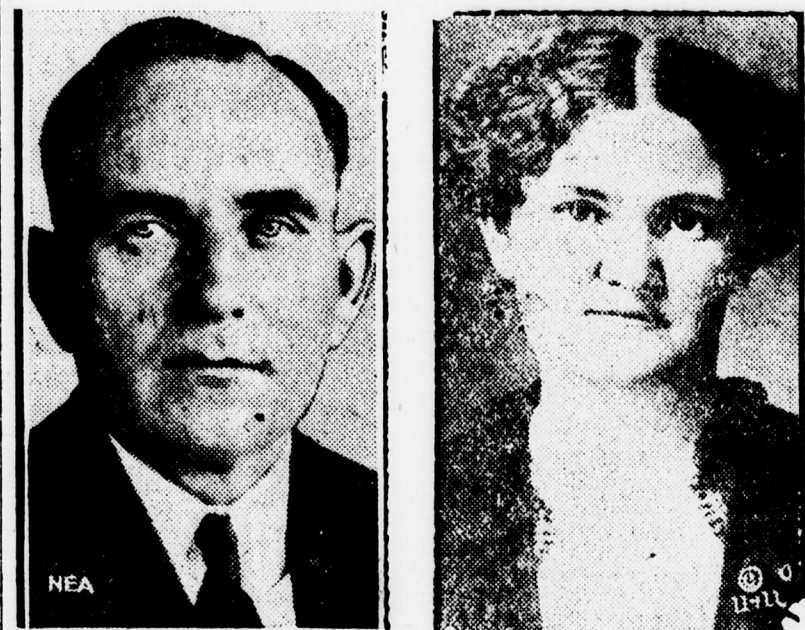

"Everyone knows," he added, "that our economic problems are very far from being solved, but we are making constant progress, both in the field of production and distribution. When certain abuses arose, we adopted a policy of government regulation and control. I have no doubt that some action of that kind was necessary and of course such a policy would be continued. But it has not been necessary to do so."

FORMER HEAD OF BIG EQUITY CO-OP COMES BACK TO FARM IN NO. DAKOTA, SEES FARMING AS PAYING BUSINESS

St. Paul, Sept. 26.—J. M. Anderson, former head of the Equity Co-operative exchange, has gone back to "the life."

So he characterizes his return to his farm near Tokio, N. D., from which he has been absent for 15 years while piloting the co-operative grain marketing movement in the northwest to success.

Mr. Anderson moved on his farm early this month, with his family, and was there in time to get his finger in the thrashing. He left St. Paul last night after spending a few days here on a business trip.

Believes Farming Sound
In speaking of his return to farming, he declared that that pursuit today offers the best prospect of any open to a man of moderate means.

"With live pork selling at 10 cents a pound, butterfat at 30 to 40 cents a pound, lamb at from 12 to 15 cents, wheat, rye, barley and corn over or close to $1," he said, "prices are so much better today than when I last farmed, that there is no comparison."

"I can see no reason why farming should not be the best paying business into which a man can get."

Mr. Anderson is farming three quarter sections, and as an example of how the farmer can easily make a living, declared that two cows on his farm alone produce the money with which to pay his grocery and fuel bills.

He had to admit, however, that when he pitched bundles to help out on a shortage of men, for a time at least, the farm life did not appear so rosy. After 15 years, he wasn't as tough to that kind of labor as he was in the old days, and the result was sore muscles too numerous to mention, and a lame back, he says.

Gives Children Advantage
"Besides the desire to get back to the farm for myself," he said last night before he left, "I wanted my children to have the advantage of a country life education. I believe they will be healthier, happier, and better citizens from living in the country."

"It's wonderful to be out there again," he declared, "away from the noise and bustle of the city. I feel sorry for those boys over there in the big buildings, who have to jump at the whistle and hurry their work with the threat of discharge forever over them. I feel sorry for them, always between walls, and where they don't get the fresh air."

"I wouldn't trade back again now for the finest job in the city."

15 KILLED IN RUSSIAN WRECK
Moscow, Russia, Sept. 26.—(By the A. P.)—Fifteen persons were killed, 25 mortally injured and 43 seriously injured today when the Moscow-Odessa express was derailed by bandits about 300 miles from Moscow.

Five women were among the 15 killed. The bandits disconnected the rails, causing the locomotive and 10 coaches and baggage car to jump the track. With the exception of the three last coaches the entire train, which was traveling at high speed, was completely wrecked, the engineer, fireman and conductor being instantly killed.

YOUTHS STEAL FROM CARS IN CITY STREETS
Plead Guilty and Are Given Sentences in the County Jail Here
Two young men who came into the North Dakota harvest fields will spend thirty days in jail here, and must also pay fines of $10 and costs assessed by Police Magistrate W. C. Cashman last night, after they pleaded guilty to petit larceny. Two others with them, who turned state's evidence, were liberated.

The men stole several articles of clothing, chiefly from automobiles parked on Main street in Bismarck, and ownership of all the clothing has not yet been determined. The goods recovered include a man's sheep-lined coat, a rain coat, a lady's sheep-lined coat, a blanket and two shirts, the latter being stolen off a clothes-line.

Alleged to have stolen a coat near Bradstock, where they were working, the authorities there detained them and called Sheriff Hodstrom and Chief of Police Martinson. Andrew K. Rogers, 22, and Rudolph C. Rogers, 27, both of West Virginia, confessed, pleaded guilty and were sentenced. Hal Everson, 22, and Paul Fish, 22, with them, did not steal but remained in a car with the others did, according to testimony. They were released. The four came to Bismarck on rainy days, in Fish's automobile, when thrashing was prevented.

PUT MEASURE ON BALLOT FOR VOTE ON NOV. 4

County Commissioners, in Resolution, Submit Bond Issue of $300,000

LACK VAULT SPACE

Resolution Recites That Bank Examiner Calls Attention To Defects

Voters of Burleigh county will on November 4 cast their ballots on the question of building a new $300,000 courthouse.

The county commissioners, in meeting here adopted a resolution putting the question of whether or not bonds shall be issued for the purpose of constructing a new courthouse and jail.

The resolution recites that the deputy bank examiner has called attention to inadequate protection of important records against fire, in the present courthouse.

The main part of the Burleigh County Courthouse is one of the oldest buildings in the city. Two wings were added to it. The resolution of the board of county commissioners is as follows:

"Whereas, many citizens have expressed a desire to have the question of building and constructing a new courthouse and jail submitted to the people of Burleigh county by a popular vote at the coming regular general election.

"And Whereas, this matter has been brought to our attention by the Bank Examiner, Mr. Gilbert Semington, and Mr. Herman Scheffer, deputy Bank Examiner, by his report, which is as follows:

"Your Examiner feels in duty bound to call attention to the inadequate protection of the important records and against fire hazard, the vaults, excepting the one of the County Auditor, being too small, poorly constructed and inadequate, and not of sufficient space to admit of a proper system of filing, for ready reference, a condition which is getting more serious from day to day and which must be met, sooner or later. The building itself is entirely too small, poorly constructed, out of date, poorly lighted and ventilated, and seemingly not fit for human occupancy. For a sanitary standpoint, to say nothing of the comfort of the public, or expediting the transaction of business with them, owing to the lack of county and lobby space."

"And Whereas, this Board considers the present courthouse and jail inadequate for the needs of the business of Burleigh County, and unsafe and unsanitary, and that it is for the best interests of the county to issue bonds to aid in such construction, which expenditure will be greater than can be provided by the annual tax levy.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the question of construction of a new courthouse and jail be submitted to a vote of the county at the coming general election, and that they give notice thereof, as provided by law. The notice to specify the amount to be raised and the precise purpose for which it is to be expended, the question submitted to the people to be as follows:

"Whether or not a courthouse and jail shall be constructed; at the sum of $300,000 to be raised by the issuing of bonds for that purpose; bonds to run for 10 years, at a rate of interest not to exceed five per cent per annum; and a tax to be levied for 10 years to pay said bonds and interest in addition to the usual taxes required to be levied; the amount of taxes to be $30,000 per year, but not to exceed three mills on the dollar on the assessed valuation of the county in any one year."

WRECKS TRAIN TO GET THRILL

Police Arrest Youth For Wrecking Rock Island Train

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 26.—William Chatterton, 15, today confessed to the wrecking of the Golden State Limited on the Rock Island line at Fairport, Iowa, last night, causing the derailment of three sleepers and the injuring of a number of passengers.

The boy removed bolts from the switch and caused the car truck to divide. He did it, he said, "just to see the cars pile up."

The boy is under arrest.

The three derailed cars bumped along on the ties when they left the rail but did not turn over.

The damage to the tracks, however, required six hours repair work before the limited got under way again.

The chief of police of Muscatine, Iowa, was passing in his automobile and saw the derailment. He found young Chatterton at the scene and arrested him. The youth, according to railway officials, is not believed to be mentally normal.

HIGHT CALM IN JAIL, SHOWING LITTLE STRAIN

Mrs. Sweetin Worried Only About Fate of Her Children, While She Is Held

Nashville, Ill., Sept. 25. (By the A. P.) Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, held in jail here in connection with the poison plot which cost the life of his wife, Anna, and the husband of his confessor, accomplice, Mrs. Elsie Sweetin today showed no outward strain of his plight while Mrs. Sweetin, in jail at Salem, Illinois, worried more over the future of her three children than her imprisonment.

"Mrs. Sweetin and I are still sweethearts and will remain sweethearts until death part us," the minister said.

Jail attendants said Rev. Hight was jovial and talked frequently. He mentioned his children and for their sake he repented more than ever of having committed the crime through which they were separated from their mother.

Mrs. Sweetin was visited yesterday by her father-in-law and their conversation mainly regarded the future of their children. She expressed a desire that they be cared for in a Masonic orphanage.

Mrs. Sweetin's apathy to food has aroused concern. The only nourishment she has taken since she was brought here Tuesday was a glass of milk late yesterday. Dr. F. M. Thompson said last night she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

URGES SAMPLES PICKED NOW

Wagner Would Have Them Saved For Corn Show

"Pick samples now for the corn show to be held in Bismarck this fall," urges Paul C. Wagner, district extension agent. "Burlington county ranks high in corn production in the state, and there is no reason why a big showing cannot be made."

"Flint corn is mature enough at the present time so that it will make good seed if it is properly dried and cured. Last year this factor was not important, as most of the corn cured on the stalk. The corn should be picked immediately and placed in drying racks, wire nettings, or strung up in a dry place where there is plenty of ventilation and safety from rodents. Don't wait until the time of the show to pick the corn."

"Last year Burlington was one of the six counties in the state in which more bushels of corn were produced than wheat. The other five counties were in the southeastern corner of the state. This year Burlington county corn is ahead of the corn in the eastern section, and the farmers here have a wonderful opportunity to make a reputation for the county if a good corn show is held."

Hog Premiums May Be Secured In Foster County

Carrington, N. D., Sept. 25.—Foster county hog producers will probably be eligible in a few weeks for a premium of ten cents per hundred on all hogs shipped to the terminal markets during the next three years as a result of the tuberculosis eradication campaign put on by County Agent C. C. Lake in cooperation with the North Dakota livestock sanitary board, the bureau of animal husbandry and the farmers of the county.

Formal application to the United States department of agriculture for the county to be placed on the "modified accredited list" was made a short time ago by the county agent, and as the county has complied with all the requirements, it is anticipated that the application will be granted in a short time. Foster is the first county in North Dakota to become eligible, and there are only two or three other counties in the state in which complete area tests have been made.

To be eligible for this list, all cattle in the county must be tested for tuberculosis, and then the herds in which reactors were found must be tested a second time. When the percentage of infection has been reduced to not more than five-tenths of one percent, the county is eligible. In Foster county the last test showed only 47 reactors out of 13,784 head, or three-tenths of one percent, which is well below the minimum figure set.

Most of the tuberculosis infection in hogs comes from cattle who have the disease, according to authorities. Nearly 15 percent of the hogs slaughtered in the country show tuberculosis infection. The packers find very little tuberculosis in hogs shipped from areas in which the disease has been eliminated from cattle, and it is for that reason that the packers are willing to pay the ten-cent premium.

RAY BUSINESS HOUSES INVITED BANDITS—PROMISES A REAL TIME

Ray, N. D., Sept. 25. In an advertisement published in the local weekly newspaper, inviting the attention of "eggheads, holdup artists and brother druggists," the Ray Drug company of this city informs criminals who may be considering the village as a point of attack that "the past record of this city is sufficient to guarantee a real nice piece for you—music and lots of action for after-hour callers."

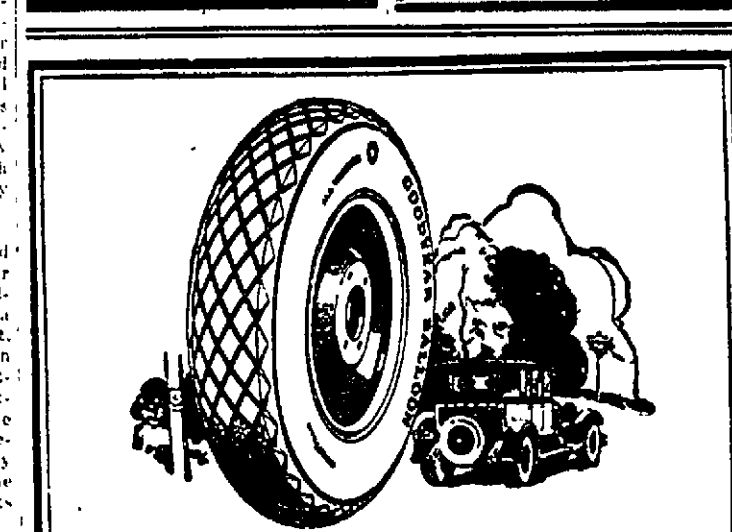

"During business hours we seem a quiet, unassuming populace, but as darkness approaches the mild man changes and it is just as difficult to handle him as trying to tie a knot in the tail end of a cyclone, and we bet the unlucky guy trying an easy getaway with goods from this city," says the advertisement.

After calling attention to the fact that the company handles glass eyes, wooden legs, crutches and other merchandise of a similar type, the advertisement states that the concern will give free all surgical dressing and surgical work necessary to patch up a perforated anatomy, and if this is not a success, to buy a lot in the cemetery, all for the first year, "captured dead or alive."

Continuing, the advertisement asks who "you eggs," in doing a real job, should pick on a dinky dark little burg and stumble around for hours, and possibly, scare a lone night watchman to death, when you can stop along the highway to a damned good town, and no matter what time of the night it is, you will find it a light as day and any of our night watchmen will greet you royally."

ROLL CALL OF RED CROSS TO BE HELD HERE

Five Response Is Expected in Burleigh County For Annual Event

With 2,000 members as the goal for Burleigh county, plans are fast developing for an extensive campaign in the annual Red Cross Roll call, which will be held here October 5 to 18.

The manifold activities of the Red Cross has become well impressed upon the people generally, and it is felt by the local workers that Burleigh county will make a fine response. John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, in a message to all Red Cross chapters, says:

The Eighth Annual Roll Call should be eagerly greeted by every chapter. Executive, and every Red Cross worker. It is your one great opportunity to tell your neighbors what your Red Cross is doing; where, how, and why.

It is the annual enlistment of millions of Americans under the banner of the American Red Cross which makes possible the continued work of this great and democratic Legion of Mercy. The need for service grows more insistent each year. To keep pace with the demands which come from every section of our country, we must have the loyal support of all.

Membership in the American Red Cross is a privilege within the reach of everyone. You, as workers within the ranks, have during Roll Call time the pleasure as well as the duty of extending to your fellow citizens the opportunity to place their names on the Red Cross roster.

The achievements of the organization during the past twelve months will make a memorable chapter in the history of relief to human suffering, at home and abroad. Our capacity for service in the years to come is limited only by the extent to which we may receive support for our work in the coming Roll Call. Let your determination be to broadcast the story of Red Cross service so that all may hear, and at the same time to give to every American everywhere the opportunity to enroll. If you do your part in this, there will be no doubt of the response.

Civil Service Examinations Are Announced

Civil service examinations will be for apprentice fish-culturalists in the Bureau of Fisheries, department of Commerce, and for immigration patrol inspectors for duty along the Mexican and Canadian borders; the examination for the first will be held here Oct. 22, and for the inspectors, on Oct. 8.

Appointees to the inspectorships will be required to perform guard duty along the two international boundary lines for the purpose of detecting and preventing the illegal entry of aliens into the United States.

The conditions under which this work is carried on are closely comparable in nature and requirements to the duties of a soldier under actual field conditions. Applicants must have had at least two years' experience as a law enforcement officer, or at least six months' experience in a combatant branch of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, or at least six months' experience in a State, Territorial, or foreign police organization comparable in rank to such forces as the Texas Rangers, Pennsylvania State Constabulary, New York State Constabulary, Royal Northwest Mounted Police, etc.

The entrance salary is $1,680 a year.

Full information and application blanks for either examination may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or from the secretary of the local board of civil-service examiners at the post office.

N. D. MEN FINED FOR SMUGGLING

Three Are Charged Double Duty on Goods Smuggled

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—Norval Shuttleworth, Ferdinand Schimmer and Frank Bloomquist, all of Dieboldt, N. D., were fined in a local court under the inland revenue act for failing to register their entry from the United States. Bloomquist and Schimmer, who operated their smuggling on a partisan basis, were each fined $50 and ordered to pay double duty on goods smuggled.

Shuttleworth was found guilty of smuggling radio sets into Canada. He escaped with a reprimand and was charged double duty on the sets.

C. Livingstone of Leitchville, a border town, was found guilty of bringing a number of automobiles into Canada and charged double duty.

These arrests were made in the efforts of Canadian customs officials to stamp out smuggling on the border.

COOLIDGE LEAD LARGE, DIGEST POLL RECORDS

President First - In Second
Week's Nation - Wide
Straw Vote Plan

LAFOLLETTE SECOND

Coolidge again leads in the second week's returns of The Literary Digest's huge presidential poll published today with LaFollette second and Davis third.

Of a total of 272,280 votes tabulated, Coolidge has 162,473; LaFollette, 65,534; and Davis, 42,811.

In California, LaFollette is running Coolidge a strong second having 19,829 tallies to the President's 22,848. Davis is leading the field in Texas and Virginia and is also ahead of LaFollette in Ohio, Kansas, and West Virginia. In all other States the Senator from Wisconsin is leading the Democratic candidate.

"The poll at first blush," The Digest states, "may not seem very cheering to the Democrats, but a slight inspection will show the fact that, with two exceptions, the Democratic States are still to be heard from and when they begin to flood in their ballots, the figures may have another story to tell."

"In the meantime it may be interesting to observe how firmly the LaFollette strength is holding up in California. The first returns, reported last week gave Coolidge 16,244, LaFollette, 15,651, and Davis 2,138. This week, the figures stand Coolidge 22,848, LaFollette 19,829, and Davis 3,008. Most Republican political prophets have placed California in the certain column for Coolidge, and founded their computation on a total electoral vote in which the Pacific States' thirteen ballots were included.

"California, it is recalled, upset one election, not long since, and, from present indications, the State is far from firmly planted in the Republican column."

"The drift of votes, shown in a general way by a tabulation of 'How the Same Voters Voted in 1920,' seems to suggest a loss of Republican strength to LaFollette in California, a much smaller loss in Illinois, Pennsylvania, and New York. Analyzing the vote in more detail, it appears from the markings of the ballot, that, of Mr. Coolidge's 22,848 votes from California 16,976 of the votes were Republicans in the last election, 1,431 were Democrats, and 4,454 either cast no vote or neglected to declare their previous affiliation."

"Of Mr. LaFollette's vote of 19,829, 10,075 say that they voted the Republican ticket in 1920 and 4,010 say they voted Democratic with 5,834 not voting. It appears, therefore, that Mr. LaFollette is drawing heavily from both sides in the Coast State."

In Illinois, the LaFollette vote of 12,728 is drawn from 2,318 former Democrats and 6,715 former Republicans, with 3,353 who did not vote in 1920. Mr. Coolidge's vote of 20,309 in the same State is drawn, 28,635 from former Republicans and 1,956 from former Democrats, with 5,647 not specifying.

"Mr. Davis' vote of 8,147, however, includes almost as many former Republican votes as Mr. Coolidge's include former Democrats. In spite of his total vote of less than one-fourth of the number credited to Mr. Coolidge, the Democratic candidate has captured 1,856 ex-Republicans. The whole matter of this floating vote, will, of course, gain in significance with increasing returns."

"Of course," The Digest explains, "it must be taken into consideration that the present poll is just getting under way, with 1,000,000 ballots per day still being mailed out to various parts of the country, that 36 of the 48 States are still to be heard from, and that there is thus far only a comparatively small vote from the twelve States now reported. Two weeks may considerably change the complexion of the returns."

"Postal returns come back quicker from the cities than from the rural districts so that the early returns in a small part of this country presents a preponderance of 'city voters,' just as the early returns on election night are from the centers of population."

"The farming districts will be heard from later. The 15,000,000 ballots of The Digest's poll have been distributed in such a way that the farming population is sure of its full quota of ballots, and farmers, by and large, are likely to be more ready than are the city dwellers, to take an interest in marking their ballots in such a political test as The Digest is conducting."

HELD FOR HUSBAND'S MURDER

This is Mrs. Elsie Sweetin of Inn, Ill., who has confessed, according to authorities at Mt. Vernon, Ill., that she poisoned her husband, Wilford Sweetin, so she might marry Mr. Lawrence M. Hight. The minister, charged with the murder of his wife, furnished her with the poison, she says.

BANKERS TO MEET IN GOLDEN CONVENTION

Diversified Program of Business and Financial Discussions Planned

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Bankers of the United States, who meet in their golden convention here September 29-October 2, have planned a most diversified program of business and financial discussions, according to Walter W. Head, president of the American Bankers Association, and have arranged for many of the leading minds of the country to address them.

The association represents 22,000 banks with an estimated capital and surplus of more than six billion dollars and aggregate resources in excess of fifty billions of dollars.

Outside the subjects of finances, railroads, agriculture, citizenship, government and other problems in which the bankers are interested, Mr. Head has pointed out that it is a presidential year and a time when "great decisions are being made in affairs of government, finance and economics—a time when knowledge and experience are at a premium."

"In the open forum for personal contact and convention discussions, our members will share their knowledge and experience with each other," he declared. "This convention will be an occasion of peculiar interest to all bankers. Mr. Head will speak on the part the banker has in the nation's business."

An entertainment program equally as elaborate has been prepared by the Chicago committee and includes sight seeing trips, luncheons, theatre parties, a smoker and a golf tournament.

the qualities of leadership expected of a gubernatorial candidate.

"In the League convention, when something came up where 'he ought to have stepped in and settled things as a leader, if it didn't concern him personally he got out of the convention and dodged it," said Cook. "He hasn't really taken a definite stand on anything," he added. "You can't pin him down. You don't want to put a man in office that is like that. You don't know what he'll do."

The manner in which Sorlie was nominated is objected to by the anti-Sorlie men.

PETITIONS FOR LEMKE FILED; CAN WITHDRAW

as controlled by the Nonpartisan League, said that S. F. Ellsworth of Jamestown, and U. L. Burdick of Fargo had been retained as counsel additional to C. L. Crum in representing the interests of the four electors whose ouster is asked. There were rumors to the effect that the LaFollette forces had decided to withdraw the four electors from the Republican column, but this was not confirmed.

Cook and O. A. Hall were prepared to file petitions placing a set of LaFollette electors in an individual column, but after Vogel filed his set they decided not to do so.

Both Cook and Hall saw Nonpartisan League and LaFollette leaders yesterday afternoon, after coming to the city by automobile, before they filed the Lemke petitions. They refused to be dissuaded.

"I was instructed by the conference to file them and no one could stop me," said Cook.

NO BASIS FOR CHARGES. DECLARES CANDIDATE SORLIE

Minot, N. D., Sept. 26.—Declaring no concern over the probable entry of William Lemke of Fargo, into the gubernatorial campaign in North Dakota as a "LaFollette-Wheeler-Progressive" candidate, an outgrowth of the Jamestown meeting of league members, over the long distance telephone from Williston told the Minot Daily News representative that, "I don't know much about this game of politics, and consequently I don't know what influences were prevalent at the Jamestown meeting."

The entry of Lemke into the campaign, Mr. Sorlie declared, would react in his (Sorlie's) favor. Answering some of the charges made against him at the Jamestown meeting, Mr. Sorlie declared:

He is not a member of the Ku Klux Klan. He refuses to mix religion in politics. He is positively for LaFollette for president.

Said that charges that the Rev. F. Hulse, Ambassador of Grand Forks, had attempted to influence him against LaFollette are untrue.

He favors removal of the LaFollette electors from the Coolidge column of the ballot in the event they are bracketed there the same as they would be in the Coolidge column.

"SLEEPY" SCHOOLS

London, Sept. 26.—The establishment of a school for sleepy children who seem unable to keep awake in their class rooms is being discussed by the London County Council Education Committee. The school would be given special ventilation and the lessons would be taught in a way to "awaken" interest in the somnolent children.

GOODING BILL SUPPORT URGED IN NO. DAKOTA

Long and Short Haul Provision Is Declared Vital To the State

MESSAGE TO CLUBS

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 26.—Civic and commerce clubs of all North Dakota cities are to be asked to express their attitude on the Gooding bill, now pending in congress, which would take from the interstate commerce commission power to grant relief from "fourth section violation" of the interstate commerce act, it was decided by the traffic committee of the Fargo Commercial club at noon today.

H. E. Reynolds, chairman of the committee, declared that in his opinion this bill is of very vital importance to all North Dakota.

Under the fourth section of the interstate commerce act, no railroad may haul goods at a lesser rate for a shorter distance than for a longer distance over the same line and in the same direction, but, the I. C. C. may grant relief from this section, making exceptions in certain instances. If the Gooding bill becomes a law, no exceptions could be granted.

Ask Long Haul Rate

The competition which transcontinental railroads are meeting from ocean traffic in the Panama canal, has brought about a request from the railroads that they be allowed to haul freight from the east through this territory to Seattle and other coast cities at a lower rate than they haul the same freight to intermediate points to meet this competition.

This would bring back the same situation which existed before the I. C. C. decided the famous Spokane case. A strong fight is being made by Spokane and Phoenix, Ariz., these cities are fighting to have the Gooding bill made a law, which would take from the I. C. C. the power to grant this request.

Officials of the traffic bureau of these cities have pointed out that if this bill is not passed and the request of the railroads is granted, the railroads may haul freight from Chicago to Seattle, for instance, at much lower rates than they haul the same freight from Chicago to North Dakota points.

The present rate on dry goods from Chicago to Steele, N. D., a distance of 512 miles is $1.54. The rate to Seattle is the same $1.54. Under the rate which is now proposed, the rate to Seattle would be $1.10 and the rate to Steele would remain the same as at present $1.54.

Some members of the traffic committee were in favor of going on record as being opposed to the principle of making any lower rate for a longer than for a shorter distance, but it was decided to give the matter considerable more study before putting the committee on record and to ask the sentiment of all other North Dakota commercial organizations.

4,000 Sheep To Be Shipped To Pembina County

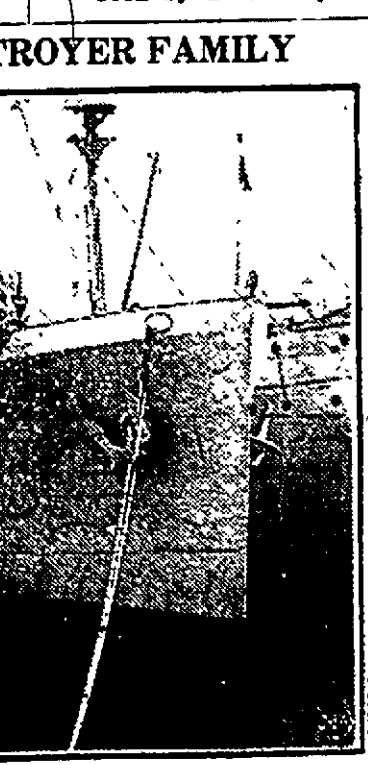

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 26.—Approximately 4,000 head of sheep will be shipped into Pembina county from Montana about the middle of October, according to William Page, agricultural development agent for the Great Northern railway, with headquarters in Grand Forks, who has been working in that district. The purchase of the sheep is financed through loans made by the Agricultural Credit corporation.

Although no applications for loans were to have been accepted after September 20 those who have not had the opportunity to get their applications in may do so through the county agent, Ed. Parizek, Mr. Page says.

There are six committees of the corporation operating in Pembina county. They are located at St. Thomas, Crystal, Walhalla, Hamilton, Pembina, Drayton and Glasston. One carload of grade Guernseys were shipped into Glasston through loans made by the corporation.

Mr. Page expects to attend the National Dairy show in Milwaukee from September 26 to October 6.

RED-BEAUTY

Indian have their beauty shows just like the white folk. But there was much waiting through western times this year. Those fair maidens with copper skins, who had fallen into the hobbed-hair ranks, were barred from the beauty pageant at the Pendleton (Ore.) round-up. Even so there were plenty of good-looking maidens, who hadn't shorn their locks, on hand. Witness Esther Molanin (tribal name White Fawn) of the Umatillas.

can it be hoped that it will be wisely administered. While it provides some defense against wrong doing, its restrictions often hamper development and progress, retard enterprise and when they fail to produce the perfection promised, tend to bring the government into discredit. The real fact is that in a republic like ours the people are government and if they cannot secure perfection in their own economic life it is altogether improbable that the government can secure it for them. The same human nature which presided over private enterprise must be employed for public action.

Some Are Success
"No doubt there are certain municipalities where some public utilities have been managed through public ownership with a creditable success. But this is very different from a proposal that the national government should take over railroads and other public utilities. What a strain this would be to our economic system will be realized when it is remembered that public commissions set the value of such utilities at about $35,000,000,000 and that they have about 2,750,000 employees. Such an undertaking would mean about $1,750,000,000 annually in bond interest and an operating budget estimated at about $9,000,000,000. These utilities are no longer in the hands of a few, directly or indirectly. They are owned by scores of millions of our inhabitants. It would mean a loss in public revenue estimated at $600,000,000 a year and while in industrial states it might not increase the tax on the farmer more than three or four per cent, in many agricultural counties it would run as high as forty per cent. When we recall the appalling loss and the difficulty in the management of $3,500,000,000 worth of ships, we should undoubtedly hesitate about taking on ten times that value in public utilities. But there is no occasion to discuss the details of public ownership."

"The government of the United States is a device for maintaining in perpetuity the rights of the people with the ultimate extinction of all privileged classes. It is a Constitution which is the product of human experience with all its toil and suffering, its bloodshed and devastation, its oppression and tyranny, but likewise with all its wisdom, its love of liberty and its determination to follow the truth. The first Continental Congress met to redress grievances which were the result of government action. The Revolution was fought to rectify those same grievances. And finally, the Constitution was adopted to prevent similar impositions from ever again being inflicted upon the people."

"They are all in that precious document, these priceless guarantees. The people do not propose again to entrust their government to others, but to retain it under their own control. No one can tax them or even propose a tax upon them save themselves and their own representatives. Instead of encroaching upon local assemblies, it guarantees each state a Republican form of government. It regulates suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. It protects the home from the unwelcome intrusion of the military force of the government. It guards the right of jury trial and undertakes to make judicial officers independent, impartial and free from every motive to follow any influence save that of the evidence, the law and truth. These are representative of the great body of our liberties, of which the Constitution is the sole source and guarantee."

Limited Powers
"Ours, as you know, is a government of limited powers. The Constitution confers the authority for certain actions upon the President and the Congress and explicitly prohibits them from taking other actions. This is done to protect the rights and liberties of the people. The government is limited, only the legislative or executive power, undertakes to overstep the bounds of its limitations, any person who is injured may resort to the courts for protection and remedy. We do not submit the precious rights of the people to a hazard of a prejudiced and irresponsible political determination, but preserve and protect them by an independent and impartial judicial determination. We do not expect the rights of the people to be protected by the public forum by popular uproar, but protect them in the sanctity of the court where the still, small voice will not fail to be heard. Any attempt to change this method of procedure is an attempt to put the people again in jeopardy of the impositions and the tyrannies from which the first Continental Congress sought to deliver them. The only position that Americans can take is that they are against all despotism whether it emanate from a monarch, from a parliament or from a mob."

Tracing Growth
"Almost all our history as an independent and united nation can be traced back to the assembling of the First Continental Congress, which we are met to celebrate. Our achievements have been wrought by adherence to its policies of reason and restraint, accompanied by firmness and determination. We are not likely to desert that course of action now."

"The case which the Congress stated was unwavering, one side or the other must give way or maintain its position by force of arms. That conflict for which the Congress had laid the logical foundation was not long in beginning. Liberty never won a more substantial and far-reaching victory than that which resulted from our Revolutionary war. It established the American nation, with all that it has since meant in the accomplishments of the world and all that it holds of future promise. A form of government was organized in harmony with what Franklin had proposed at Albany in 1754. But the Constitution was not adopted until various experiments with unworkable systems showed some such action necessary. COOLIDGE LEAD LARGE, DIGEST POLL RECORDS

Week's Nation-Wide
Straw Vote Plan

LAFOLLETTE SECOND

Coolidge again leads in the second week's returns of The Literary Digest's huge presidential poll published today with LaFollette second and Davis third.

Of a total of 272,299 votes tabulated, Coolidge has 162,473, LaFollette, 63,534, and Davis, 42,611.

In California, LaFollette is running Coolidge a strong second having 19,829 tallies to the President's 22,848. Davis is leading the field in Texas and Virginia. He is also ahead of LaFollette in Ohio, Kansas, and West Virginia. In all other States the Senator from Wisconsin is leading the Democratic candidate.

"The poll at first blush," The Digest states, "may not seem very cheering to the Democrats, but a slight inspection will show the fact that, with two exceptions, the Democratic States are still to be heard from and when they begin to flood in their ballots, the figures may have another story to tell."

"In the meantime it may be interesting to observe how firmly the LaFollette strength is holding up in California. The first returns, reported last week, gave Coolidge 16,244, LaFollette, 1,561, and Davis 233. This week, the figures stand Coolidge 22,848, LaFollette 19,829, and Davis 2,008. Republican political prophets have placed California in the certain column for Coolidge, and founded their computation on a total electoral vote in which the Pacific State's thirteen ballots were included.

"California," he recalled, upset one election, not long since, and from present indications, the State is far from firmly planted in the Republican column.

"The drift of votes, shown in a general way by a tabulation of 'How the Same Voters Voted in 1920,' seems to suggest a loss of Republican strength to LaFollette in California, a much smaller loss in Illinois, Pennsylvania, and New York. Analyzing the vote in more detail, it appears from the markings of the ballot, that, of Mr. Coolidge's 22,848 votes from former Republicans, 14,311 were Republicans in the last election, 1,431 were Democrats, and 4,364 either cast no vote or neglected to declare their previous affiliation.

"Of Mr. LaFollette's vote of 19,829, 10,075 of that vote the Republican ticket in 1920 and 4,010 say they voted Democratic with 5,134 not voting. It appears, therefore, that Mr. LaFollette is drawing heavily from both sides in the Coast State.

"LaFollette's vote of 12,728 is drawn from 2,318 former Democrats and 6,715 former Republicans, with 3,533 who did not vote in 1920. Mr. Coolidge's vote of 36,309 in the same state is drawn, 28,635 from former Republicans, 1,967 from former Democrats, with 5,647 not specifying.

"Mr. Davis' vote of 8,147, however, includes almost as many former Republican votes as Mr. Coolidge's include former Democrats. In spite of his total vote of less than that of the fourth of the vote credited to Mr. Coolidge, the Democratic candidate has captured 1,366 ex-Republicans. The whole matter of this floating vote, will, of course, gain in significance with increasing returns.

"Of course," The Digest explains, "it must be taken into consideration that the present poll is just getting under way, with 1,000,000 ballots per day still being mailed out to various parts of the country, that 36 of the 48 States are still to be heard from, and that there is thus far only a comparatively small vote from the twelve States now reported. Two weeks may considerably change the complexion of the returns.

"Postal returns come back quicker from the cities than from the rural districts, so that the early returns in a poll of this sort represents a preponderance of 'city voters,' just as the early returns on election night are from the centers of population.

"The farming districts will be heard from later. The 15,000,000 ballots of The Digest's poll have been distributed in such a way that the farming population is sure of its full quota of ballots, and farmers, by and large, are likely to be more ready than are the city dwellers, to take an interest in marking their ballots in such a political test as The Digest is conducting."

PETITIONS FOR LENKE FILED; CAN WITHDRAW

(Continued from page one.) as controlled by the Nonpartisan League, said that S. F. Ellsworth of Jamestown, and U. L. Burdick of Fargo had been retained as counsel additional to C. L. Crum in representing the interests of the four electors whose names are asked. There were rumors to the effect that the LaFollette forces had decided to withdraw the four electors from the Republican column, but this was not confirmed.

Cook and O. A. Hall were prepared to file petitions placing a set of LaFollette electors in an individual column, but after Vogel filed his set they decided not to do so.

BANKERS TO MEET IN GOLDEN CONVENTION

Diversified Program of Business and Financial Discussions Planned

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Bankers of the United States, who meet in their golden convention here September 29-October 2, have planned a most diversified program of business and financial discussions, according to Walter W. Head, president of the American Bankers Association, and have arranged for many of the leading minds of the country to address them.

"The association represents 22,000 banks with an estimated capital and surplus of more than six billion dollars and aggregate resources in excess of fifty billions of dollars. Outside the subjects of finances, railroads, agriculture, citizenship, government and other problems in which the bankers are interested, Mr. Head has pointed out that it is a presidential year and a time when 'great decisions are being made in affairs of government, finance and economics—a time when knowledge and experience are at a premium.'

"In the open forum for personal contact and convention discussions, our members will share their knowledge and experience with each other," he declared. "This convention will be an occasion of peculiar interest to all bankers." Mr. Head will speak on the part the banker has in the nation's business.

An entertainment program equally as elaborate has been prepared by the Chicago committee and includes sight seeing trips, luncheons, theatre parties, a smoker and a golf tournament.

Among the speakers are Arthur Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago; C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central Railroad, John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, James C. Cropsy, Justice of the Supreme Court of New York, Senator George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, E. F. Meredith, Dwight W. Morrow, J. P. Morgan & Co.

ANTI-SORLIE MEN TO KEEP ON FIGHTING

"In the League conventions when something came up, where President Cook ought to have stepped in and settled things as a leader, if it didn't concern him personally he got out of the convention and dodged it," said Cook. "He hasn't really taken a definite stand on anything," he added. "You can't pin him down. You don't want to put a man in office that is like that. You don't know what he'll do."

The manner in which Sorlie was nominated is objected to by the anti-ti-Sorlie men. They feel, they said, that he will hurt the "progressive cause."

Both Cook and Hall saw Nonpartisan League and LaFollette leaders yesterday afternoon, after coming to the city by automobile, before they filed the Lenke petitions. They refused to be dissuaded.

"I was instructed by the conference to file them and no one could stop me," said Cook.

NO BASIS FOR CHARGES, DECLARES CANDIDATE SORLIE

Minot, N. D., Sept. 26.—Declaring no concern over the probable entry of William Lenke of Fargo, into the gubernatorial campaign in North Dakota as a "LaFollette-Wheeler-Progressive" candidate, an outgrowth of the Jamestown meeting of league leaders, A. G. Sorlie of Grand Forks, candidate for governor endorsed by the league over the long distance telephone from Williston told the Minot Daily News representative that, "I don't know much about this game of politics, and consequently I don't know what influences were prevalent at the Jamestown meeting."

The entry of Lenke into the campaign, Mr. Sorlie declared, would react in his (Sorlie's) favor. Answering some of the charges made against him at the Jamestown meeting, Mr. Sorlie declared: "He is not a member of the Ku Klux Klan."

He refuses to mix religion in politics. He is positively for LaFollette for president.

Said that charges that the Rev. F. Halsey Ambrose of Grand Forks, had attempted to influence him against LaFollette are untrue.

He favors removal of the LaFollette electors from the Coolidge column of the ballot to the LaFollette column in the event they are bracketed there the same as they would be in the Coolidge column.

"SLEEPY" SCHOOLS—The establishment of a school for sleepy children who seem unable to keep awake in their class rooms is being discussed by the London County Council Education Committee. The school would be given special ventilation and the lessons would be taught in a way to "awaken" interest in the somnolent children.

GOODING BILL SUPPORT URGED IN NO. DAKOTA

Long and Short Haul Provision Is Declared Vital To the State

MESSAGE TO CLUBS

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 26.—Civic and commerce clubs of all North Dakota cities are to be asked to express their attitude on the Gooding bill, now pending in congress, which would take from the interstate commerce commission power to grant relief from "fourth section violation" of the interstate commerce act, it was decided by the traffic committee of the Fargo Commercial club at noon today.

H. E. Reynolds, chairman of the committee, declared that in his opinion this bill is of very vital importance to all North Dakota.

Under the fourth section of the interstate commerce act, no railroad may haul goods at a lesser rate for a shorter distance than for a longer distance over the same line and in the same direction, but, the I. C. C. may grant relief from this section, making exceptions in certain instances. If the Gooding bill becomes a law, no exceptions could be granted.

Ask Long Haul Rate
The competition which transcontinental railroads are meeting from ocean traffic via the Panama canal, has brought about a request from the railroads that they be allowed to haul freight from the east through this territory to Seattle and other coast cities at a lower rate than they haul the same freight to intermediate points to meet this competition.

This would bring back the same situation which existed before the I. C. C. decided the famous Spokane case. A strong fight is being made by Spokane and Phoenix, Ariz., these cities are fighting to have the Gooding bill made a law, which would take from the I. C. C. the power to grant this request.

Officials of the traffic bureaus of these cities have pointed out that if this bill is not passed and the request of the railroads is granted, the railroads may haul freight from Chicago to Seattle, for instance, at much lower rates than they haul the same freight from Chicago to North Dakota points.

The present rate on dry goods from Chicago to Steele, N. D., a distance of 812 miles is $1.58. The rate to Seattle is the same $1.58. Under the rate which is now proposed, the rate to Seattle would be $1.10 and the rate to Steele would remain the same as at present $1.58.

Some members of the traffic committee were in favor of going on record as being opposed to the principle of making any lower rate for a longer than for a shorter distance, but it was decided to give the matter considerable more study before putting the committee on record and to ask the sentiment of all other North Dakota commercial organizations.

4,000 Sheep To Be Shipped To Pembina County

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 26.—Approximately 4,000 head of sheep will be shipped into Pembina county from Montana about the middle of October, according to William Page, agricultural development agent for the Great Northern railway, with headquarters in Grand Forks, who has been working in that district. The purchase of the sheep is financed through loans made by the Agricultural Credit corporation.

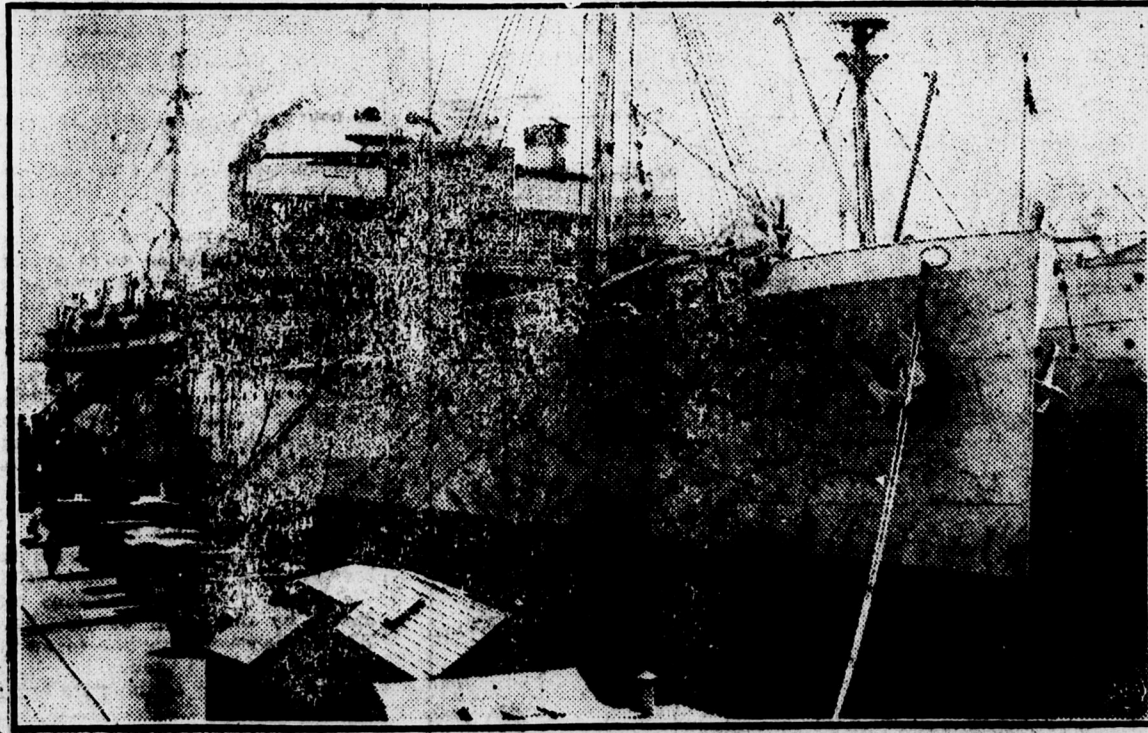

Although no applications for loans were to have been accepted after September 20 those who have not had the opportunity to get their applications in may do so through the county agent, Ed. Parizek, Mr. Page says.

There are six committees of the corporation operating in Pembina county. They are located at St. Thomas, Crystal, Walhalla, Hamilton, Pembina, Drayton and Glasston. One carload of grade Guernseys were shipped into Glasston through loans made by the corporation.

Mr. Page expects to attend the National Dairy show in Milwaukee from September 26 to October 6.

RED-BEAUTY

Indians have their beauty shows just like the white folk. But there was much wailing through western tepees this year. Those fair maidens with copper skins, who had fallen into the bobbed-hair ranks, were barred from the beauty pageant at the Pendleton (Ore.) round-up. Even so, there were plenty of good-looking maidens, who hadn't shorn their locks, on hand. Witness Esther Motanic (tribal name White Pawn) of the Umatillas.

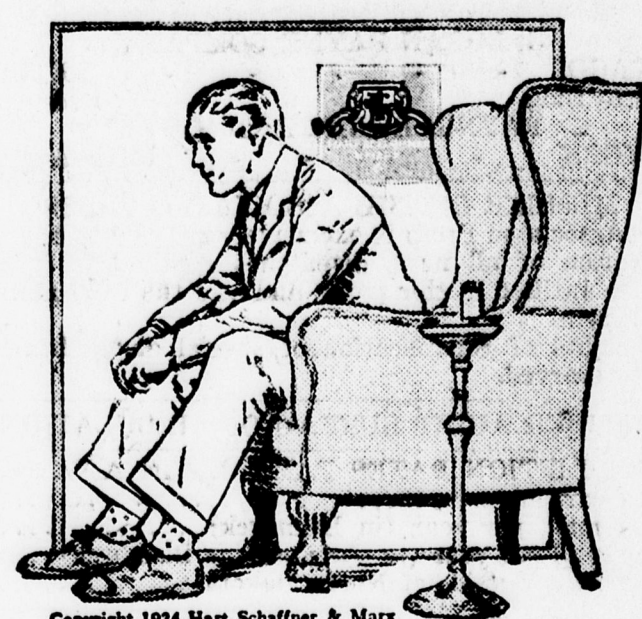

COOLIDGE SEES OWNERSHIP OF RAILS BURDEN

(Continued from page one.) can it be hoped that it will be always wisely administered. While it provides some defense against wrong doing, its restrictions often hamper development and progress, retard enterprise and when they fail to produce the perfection promised, tend to bring the government into discredit. The real fact is that in a republic like ours the people are government and if they cannot secure perfection in their own economic life it is altogether improbable that the government can secure it for them. The same human nature which presided over private enterprise must be employed for public action.

Some Are Success
"No doubt there are certain municipalities where some public utilities have been managed with such public ownership with a creditable success. But this is very different from a proposal that the national government should take over railroads and other public utilities. What a strain this would be to our economic system will be realized when it is remembered that public commissions set the value of such utilities at about $35,000,000,000 and that they have about 2,750,000 employees. Such an undertaking would mean about $17,500,000,000 annually in bond interest and an operating budget estimated at about $9,000,000,000. These utilities are no longer in the hands of a few directly or indirectly. They are owned by scores of millions of our inhabitants. It would mean a loss in public revenue estimated at $600,000,000 a year and while in industrial states it might not increase the tax on the farmer more than three or four per cent in many agricultural counties it would run as high as forty per cent. When we recall the appalling loss and the difficulty in the management of $3,500,000,000 worth of ships, we should undoubtedly hesitate about taking on ten times that value in public utilities. But there is no occasion to discuss the details of public ownership.

"The government of the United States is a device for maintaining in perpetuity the rights of the people with the ultimate extinction of all privileged classes. It is a Constitution which is the product of human experience with all its toil and suffering, its moodshed and devastation, its oppression and tyranny, but likewise with all its wisdom, its love of liberty and its determination to follow the truth. The first Continental Congress met to redress grievances which were the result of government action. The Revolution was fought to resist those same grievances. And finally, the Constitution was adopted to prevent similar impositions from ever again being inflicted upon the people. The people do not propose again to entrust their government to others, but to retain it under their own control. No one can tax them or even propose a tax upon them save themselves and their own representatives. Instead of encroaching upon local assemblies, it guarantees each state a Republican form of government. It regulates suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. It protects the home from the uninvited intrusion of the military force of the government. It guards the right of jury trial and undertakes to make judicial officers

ple again in jeopardy of the impositions and the tyrannies from which the first Continental Congress sought to deliver them. The only position that Americans can take is that they are against all despotism whether it emanate from a monarch, from a parliament or from a mob.

Tracing Growth
"Almost all our history as an independent and united nation can be traced back to the assembling of the First Continental Congress, which we are met to celebrate. Our achievements have been wrought by adherence to its policies of reason and restraint, accompanied by firmness and determination. We are not likely to desert that course of action now.

"The case which the Congress stated was unanswerable, one side or the other must give way or maintain its position by force of arms. That conflict for which the Congress had laid the logical foundation was not long in beginning. Liberty never won a more substantial and far-reaching victory than that which resulted from our Revolutionary war. It established the American nation, with all that it has since meant in the accomplishments of the world and all that it holds of future promise. A form of government was organized in harmony with what Franklin had proposed at Albany in 1754. But the Constitution was not adopted until various experiments with unworkable systems showed some such action necessary. Whatever may be the reputation of that great instrument at home, modified and adopted to local needs it has been adopted as the fundamental law for republics in every quarter of the world.

ROLL CALL OF RED CROSS TO BE HELD HERE

The Response Is Expected In Burleigh County For Annual Event

With 2,000 members as the goal for Burleigh county, plans are fast developing for an extensive campaign in the annual Red Cross Roll call, which will be held here October 3 to 18.

The manifold activities of the Red cross have become well impressed upon the people generally, and it is expected that the local workers that Burleigh county will make a fine response. John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, in a message to all Red Cross chapters, says:

The Eighth Annual Roll Call should be eagerly greeted by every chapter Executive, and every Red cross worker. It is your one great opportunity to tell your neighbors what your Red cross is doing; where, how, and why.

It is the annual enlistment of millions of Americans under the banner of the American Red Cross, which makes possible the continued work of his great and democratic Legion of mercy. The need for service grows more insistent each year. To keep pace with the demands which come from every section of our country, we must have the loyal support of all.

Membership in the American Red Cross is a privilege within the reach of everyone. You, as workers within the ranks, have during Roll Call time the pleasure as well as the duty of extending to your fellow citizens the opportunity to place their names on the Red Cross roster.

The achievements of the organization during the past twelve months will make a memorable chapter in the history of relief to human suffering, at home and abroad. Our capacity for service in the year to come is limited only by the extent to which we may receive support for our work in the coming Roll Call. Let your determination be to broadcast the story of Red Cross service so that all may hear, and at the same time to give to every American every where the opportunity to enroll. If you do your part in this, there will be no doubt of the response.

Civil Service Examinations Are Announced

Civil service examinations will be for apprentice fish-culturalists in the Bureau of Fisheries, department of Commerce, and for immigration patrol inspectors for duty along the Mexican and Canadian borders; the examination for the first will be held here Oct. 22, and for the inspectors, on Oct. 8.

Appointees to the inspectorships will be required to perform guard duty along the two international boundary lines for the purpose of detecting and preventing the illegal entry of aliens into the United States.

The conditions under which this work is carried on are closely comparable in nature and requirements to the duties of a soldier under actual field conditions. Applicants must have had at least two years' experience as a law enforcement officer, or at least six months' experience in a combatant branch of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, or at least six months' experience in a State, Territorial, or foreign police organization comparable in rank to such forces as the Texas Rangers, Pennsylvania State Constabulary, New York State Constabulary, Royal Northwest Mounted Police, etc.

The entrance salary is $1,080 a year.

Full information and application blanks for either examination may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or from the secretary of the local board of civil-service examiners at the post office.

N. D. MEN FINED FOR SMUGGLING

Three Are Charged Double Duty on Goods Smuggled

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—Norval Shuttleworth, Ferdinand Schimmer and Frank Bloomquist, all of Dieboldt, N. D., were fined in a local court under the inland revenue act for failing to register their entry from the United States. Bloomquist and Schimmer, who operated their smuggling on a partisan basis, were each fined $50 and ordered to pay double duty on goods smuggled.

Shuttleworth was found guilty of smuggling radio sets into Canada. He escaped with a reprimand and was charged double duty on the sets.

C. Livingstone of Leitchville, a border town, was found guilty of bringing a number of automobiles into Canada and charged double duty.

These arrests were made in the efforts of Canadian customs officials to stamp out smuggling on the border.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

HENTSCH

German militarists have a new goat. They're blaming Colonel Hentsch, member of their general staff in 1914, for ordering the retreat that lost the Battle of the Marne and shortcircuited what might have been a speedy winning of the war.

What really lost Germany the war was the fallacy of the thing she fought for. In a titanic human upheaval like the World War, Providence has a hand in the result and permits no error in the decision. Militarism, rather than Germany, lost the war. Time will prove this. Militarism seems very much alive now, but it's like a chicken after its head is chopped off.

FORMS OF WEALTH

The "principal forms of wealth" in Pennsylvania total about three times as big as the wealth of the much larger state, Texas. This is the latest estimate by Uncle Sam.

Texas, farmed intensively, could support the population of the whole world, many experts claim. Its natural resources, as yet barely scratched, are fabulously profuse—undoubtedly many times greater than Pennsylvania's.

Pennsylvania is ranked higher because it has had the population to produce and accumulate. Man-power, in the last analysis, is the greatest form of wealth—in many ways the only.

GAMBLING

Almost 164 million shares of stock changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange between the first of the year and Sept. 1. That's at the rate of over 240 million shares a year, and a good many observers are alarmed at the "gambling craze."

If they will consult old newspaper files, they will find that stock trading was on even a bigger scale in the years 1905 and 1906 and even as far back as 1901. Since the dollar in those years bought twice as much as now, there really was more than twice as much speculation as in 1924.

FATAL ACCIDENTS

Fatal auto accidents have increased by half in five years. This is due, however, not to increased carelessness, but to the larger number of machines in use. The element of danger accompanying the average car is slowly but surely growing less. All this is the result of safety-first campaigns and more intelligent handling of traffic. We've made a good start in this direction, but there's still a long way to go.

Accidents, almost without exception, originate in someone's carelessness.

GAMBLERS

Fifteen and 20 years ago, on the New York Stock Exchange, speculation centered in railroad securities. Roughly, two shares of railroad stocks were sold for every industrial share that changed hands.

Speculation has shifted to industrial securities. In the first eight months of 1924, four industrial stocks were bought and sold for every railroad stock "traded."

Quite a revolution in gambling—a shift from transportation to production as the stakes.

NEAR-INSANE

Experts claim 200,000 people in New York city are "on the border line between sanity and madness." If you know New York, you'll comment that the estimate is too low.

On a population basis, there must be at least a couple of millions of such borderline cases in the whole country. And the craziest ones are not locked up. Their votes count as much as the ballots of the intelligent. Democracy is not without its handicaps. Sensible mentality tests would be a wise safeguard at the polls.

SLAVE

The average bricklayer now handles 500 bricks a day, employers estimate. Invading their industry is an electric machine that lays 1200 bricks an hour. The three men operating it do the work of 20 masons.

This situation gives you an almost clairvoyant picture of the future that lies ahead in every basic industry. "Skilled labor" of future generations will be skilled machine operators.

PIPES

Suppose an enemy fleet discovered our navy and began to bombard New York City. Presto! Pipe lines are thrown open, relays of pumping stations start oil flowing from Texas or Wyoming. The soil spreads rapidly, is set afire, soon the ocean is blazing for 100 miles out. Quite possible.

The oil industry has a network of nearly 83,000 miles of pipe lines underground in 23 states.

TAX

New York state collected 25 million dollars income taxes from its residents in 1923. New York City gets nearly half. State income tax is spreading.

Income taxes levied by cities may come later. Money will have to be raised some way. Municipalities in most cases are dangerously close to the saturation point or limit in mortgaging the future.

SPIRITUAL

The growth of materialism has far outdistanced the mental and spiritual development of man, warns Sir Marx Muspratt, the celebrated chemist. Strange words from a scientist. But he is right.

Nearly all of what we consider as economic and social problems are really spiritual problems. No solution, as long as we deal with material effects instead of spiritual causes.

A baby grand cost more than a grand baby. Some say it sounds better and some say it doesn't.

AMERICAN WRITERS IN RUSSIA

(Maurice G. Hindus, in Saturday Review of Literature)

The Russian has abandoned his old literary gods for new ones, and of these the ones that he especially enjoys are, curiously enough, Americans. There are four American authors who are the idols of the Russian reading public now. They are America's ambassadors in Russia, destined in my opinion, to wield a more profound influence over Russian social and literary life than any official American that has ever been sent from Washington to Petrograd.

It is easy enough to guess who one of these authors is. Jack London has always been a favorite in Russia. He still is, though not as much as he was in the day when I attended school in a Russian village. The school children do not read him as much as they once did.

It is easier still to surmise who another is. It is as unnecessary for the Russian to take to Upton Sinclair as it is for the American to take to Gene Stratton-Porter. Both strike at a responsive chord in national character. It is a backward Russian proletarian who has not read and grows excited over Jimmie Higgins and "The Jungle." In my recent wanderings in European Russia whenever I called upon editors of provincial journals one of the questions I was always sure of being asked was whether I knew Upton Sinclair. Communists took it for granted that he was a member of the party. They talked of him as "our Sinclair."

If it is easy to understand the appeal that Jack London and Upton Sinclair make to the present-day Russian reading public, it is quite baffling to explain the remarkable vogue of O. Henry. What is there in him that can stir a revolutionary people? What inspiration can the apostles of the so-called proletarian culture, or the Russian masses draw from him? He has no message for the revolutionary populace. Not one of his stories has the flamboyant class appeal that the tamest of London's or Sinclair's tales possess.

True, he has written of common folk burdened with packs of everyday worries and troubles. But so has Chekhov, so has Gorky, so has many another illustrious Russian writer. And Gorky is ever the passionate rebel. And Chekhov, too, manages to squeeze a goodly portion of biting dissent into his pages. But O. Henry at best only ripples with good-humored protest. Yet Gorky and Chekhov are pushed into the background and O. Henry is elevated to a high pedestal.

The most phenomenal in Russia is not the popularity of O. Henry or Sinclair or London, but of an American author who has not the slightest affinity with any of these men, and who has not the faintest trace of a message for the Soviet state. Edgar Rice Burroughs is the rage from one end of the country to the other. Anybody who reads anything reads the Tarzan stories—soldiers, proletarians, peasants, intellectuals. State and private publishing houses are clamoring for their presses hot churning out edition after edition of the Tarzan tales, which are snatched up as soon as they are placed on the market.

While on a train once from Moscow to Nizhny-Novgorod, I became acquainted with a salesman from one of the leading private publishing houses who was on his way to the big fair to sell books. He unpacked his case and showed me his "samples," quite an assortment of publications on engineering, hygiene, agriculture, chemistry, social problems; and then pointing to a copy of Tarzan of the Apes, he said: "I'll sell more of this than of all the others put together."

I have not the least doubt but he does not recall a single bookshop in any of the cities I visited or a single newsstand at any of the railroad stations but had a prominent display of the Tarzan books.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Lands alive, gracious me on us!" exclaimed the Sour Old Woman when she lifted the board in her kitchen floor and peeped down into her cellar. "The Twins and the Sand Man have escaped and taken the magic sand with them. They must have had magic along and I never knew it."

But suddenly she heard a snore and upon looking more closely didn't she see the Sand Man himself with his head on a sack of potatoes, fast asleep.

"Humph!" said the Sour Old Woman. "He must have used some of his own sleepy sand for snuff. But the sand's gone, that's sure, Sand Man or no Sand Man—and now all the babies will get their naps. Won't Tweekanose be cross, though, after me promising to help him out."

The Sour Old Woman left the Sand Man sleeping and went to her front door under the water-fall. She caught some of the water in a cap and sprinkling some drops on her door-sill she said a charm. "Eena Meena, quickly come, And see the harm the Twins have done."

Instantly there stood Eena Meena the magician, in his flowing robes, his nose making a bow to his chin and his chin making a curtsy to his nose.

"What wouldst?" said he. "You have summoned me with the magic that I gave you on your thousand birthday."

The Battle Rages

The Tangle

You, dear Ruth, have probably gone over all this phase of married life from another angle; yet it could not seem so terribly bad to you, for at least you have married again. You deserve everything now that life can give to you, and I sincerely hope you will have it.

You were not such a baby about it all as I have been. You kept all your unhappiness to yourself. I remember the only time you ever said anything to me about Harry was the time he came into the restaurant with that woman he ran away with finally. It was the beginning of the end, wasn't it?

Isn't it strange, dear, that we never know just when the beginning of the end begins? Perhaps it's just as well. You would have been even more unhappy than you were if you had known it then.

Another one of my problems just now is Alice. You remember I told you Karl wanted me to write her an invitation to come home. I can't do that, but I am going to have mother do it. I do not feel I can ever be the same to Alice. If she were not my sister I am certain I should never speak to her again. In fact, I should not do so anyway if it were not for mother and father.

I am not sure whether I want her to come back before John goes. He will say something to her that will precipitate a terrible quarrel, yet I wish Alice could be made to tell John all about the pearls. I think, then, everything would be all right, as far as those troublesome old beads are concerned.

Of course there is still the shop, the dear little lingerie shop that has given us so much joy. What are we going to do with that? However, we can let that wait until I get home.

I've taken up this entire letter with telling you my troubles, yet I haven't spoken to you of the most terrible one of all, the thing that hangs over me like a pall and keeps me from looking at my other troubles with any degree of sanity, for in all these other troubles I am banking on time. He is such a beneficial old fellow he usually brings things out all right in the end; but once in a while even he cannot make the two ends match, particularly if one makes a mistake in making up one's account of debit and credit.

I said something of this kind to dad the other day, and he told me a story of an old man who kept a general store in the place where he was born, who kept his accounts in a unique way and never answered any letters. At last his affairs got in such shape that he had to call in an expert who brought him to task for it and explained to him that was the reason his affairs were mixed up.

He said he didn't think that was possible, for he had found through a long life that if you kept letters long enough, very few of them needed an answer. It was only another way of saying, my dear, that if one just has patience, Time will give you the right perspective on all things.

In looking over the man's accounts, the expert accountant brought him up short one day because in going over his books he had found a man's name and nothing but a list except a great, round O. "What is this?" he asked.

"After looking at it a few moments, the man said: "Mr. Blank owes me a cheese."

PATH OF LEAST RESISTANCE

By Albert Apple

Electricity follows the path of least resistance. So does falling water, rushing back to its source, the sea. So does the agile mercury from a broken thermometer, obeying gravity by darting down to the lowest level it can reach.

Man, too, obeys this natural law—follows the path of least resistance. In other words, man inclines to the easiest way.

While it is natural for man to follow the easiest way, his progress comes by taking the more difficult roads or paths. Progress is not unnatural. But nature makes us pay the price.

We never get anywhere by following the easiest way.

It is easier to sleep on the ground, exposed to the weather. But man, beginning with his first crude huts, on to the luxurious skyscraper apartment house of the modern city, has taken the more difficult way—knowing that effort's reward is worth its price. The comfortable home is well worth the energy expended in getting it and in maintaining it.

Work is not the pleasantest thing in the world, despite the Big Talk of the platitudes—most of which are written by lazy dawdlers. The philosopher who urges mankind to toil is rarely energetic himself. But that does not lessen the truth and wisdom of his teachings.

Work is not the most enjoyable way of putting in our time. It certainly is not the easiest way—the path of least resistance. Yet we all know that work is what moves us ahead—brings us our necessities and comforts.

Men are resigned to their lot and are not following the line of least resistance—when they work at their daily tasks.

But when work is over and man relaxes, he slips into the easiest way.

Particularly in his reading matter. He drifts through the entertaining, recreational news—scandal, crime, the unusual. These are the easiest ways—requiring no brain effort. Too bad, that political news and speeches require thought and, accordingly, get little of the attention they deserve. Yet if people every four years gave a bit more thought to national politics, it might lead to easier ways in their job of making a living.

It's a mistake to kid national politics. Admittedly a dry subject, it is really a prizefight in which prices and living conditions are to large extent determined for the coming four years.

New York, Sept. 26.—The most enlightening writer on New York society, its doing and undoings comes from Philadelphia.

For more than 10 years he has been mingling with the select, and telling his findings via newspapers.

He is Maury Paul, born in society himself, his mother a Biddle and his father a Paul. He is the only sure blooded society reporter in the big city.

As a young man in the banking business in Philadelphia, he became incensed with the manner in which the doings of society were chronicled. He appealed to an editor and in response to a challenge became a society writer.

Believing that people were not interested particularly in the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Jones gave a dinner, he worked on the theory that people were interested in just what type plate Mr. Jones threw at the missus during a trying six course meal. He was successful.

A few years later he accepted a similar post in New York. He knew little of New York society and his first assignment was to cover the opening of the opera season.

He went—then bluffed through a story. The next day his managing editor approached him and said, "I'll give you one more chance. In yesterday's story you opened every grave in Woodlawn cemetery. You had persons attending the opera who have been dead 30 years."

Then Paul began to study New York's family tree, much as one would study law, medicine or boiler-making.

"The public has a misconception of society," he says, "Society does not want publicity and society people do not hire press agents. In fact society shuns public mention and it is the most difficult news to gather."

In all the years Paul has been writing about society he never has used his own name. He has written under the names "Dolly Madison" and "Cholly Knickerbocker."

In quaint old Sixth Avenue, sandwiched between the aristocracy of Fifth and the glitter of Broadway, is a penny arcade that does a thriving business. The shooting gallery, with its metallic rabbits and ducks, scampering mechanically across a horizon seems to prick the imagination of all New Yorkers who try their skill in it.

For on the way out there is a booth where pictures of the shooters in cowboy clothes are made. Nearly all patronize it. New Yorkers love New York and boast of it in a superior manner—but they all have yearnings for the West, the open spaces where they are sure Indians fight with tomahawks.

Skirts are getting shorter. Just now they are 11 inches from the sidewalk and will be higher within a few weeks according to fashion's decrees. The transition period from the long, flowing garments to the shorter, strictly tailored models, will be slow, however, as Fifth Avenue is bearing evidence. The shorter skirts are still in the minority.

FABLES ON HEALTH

SOME KITCHEN HINTS

Keeping the pantry and kitchen in sanitary condition was another problem Mollie Jones took upon herself when the hygiene course was started at her school.

The Jones kitchen was a bit old-fashioned without the tiled floors and such as go into many more up-to-date places.

Food chambers should be closely watched. They should frequently be washed with and scrubbed with hot soapuds. A few drops of ammonia in the water help. Clean the ice box thoroughly and frequently. Do this when the ice is low. Hot, soapy water should be used on the ice racks. The ice chamber should be particularly well scrubbed. The waste pipe should be removed and boiling water poured through it.

The pantry should be most carefully watched to see that no fruits or vegetables are rotting and that no foods are giving forth bad odors. Keep the shelves carefully washed and disinfected, for it is from here that the food for the table comes and no chance of contamination should be taken.

MANDAN NEWS

MAY CHANGE PRECINCTS
Plans to request the Morton county board of commissioners to create a new voting precinct in the city of Mandan, were approved by the board of city commissioners at the regular meeting.

The first, fourth and fifth wards will remain the same as at present, it was indicated, the city commissioners recommending that three wards be made of the present second and third wards. This redistricting would reduce the voting strength of the second ward by a small number and cut more than a third of the voting strength from the third ward's present registration of more than 800.

It is expected that Mrs. Parkes, who is known to many of the women through her organization work this spring, will have a worthwhile message, as she has just come from Minneapolis, where the League is very active.

Both men and women of all parties are invited to attend the meeting, which will begin at 8 o'clock. There are no charges.

MY BEAUTY

IS ALL DUE TO BEAUTY HELPS By Edna Wallace Hopper

I was a plain girl with little distinction. I made myself a famous beauty. Now, after 35 years as a stage star, I remain a beauty still. The thousands who see me daily on the stage know that I look 19.

When I was a girl, my rich mother took me on a world search for the supreme beauty helps. Those helps made me famous. Since then I have kept in touch with every new discovery. I have made many trips to France. So what I was and what I am are due to scientific help.

Now women have been convinced me that I should share these helps with others. Millions of girls and women want what I have gained. So I have combined all the helps I have discovered in four preparations, with 52 ingredients. And I have arranged so that all druggists and toilet counters offer them to all who wish.

One is a liquid cleanser, which I call my Facial Youth. Lucile Lantieri, the famous Parisian beauty, first told me what it did. Now great beauty experts the world over are advising this formula. No other cleanser which man has discovered does what this cleanser does.

My Facial Youth contains no animal, no vegetable fat. It cannot in any way assimilate with the skin. It simply cleans the depths, then departs. All the grime, dead skin and clogging matter comes out with it. That is the first beauty essential—an utterly clean skin. But I never dreamed what a clean skin meant until I found this Facial Youth.

Now Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. The cost is 75c. Write me for my Beauty Book and I'll send you it something else to please you. Edna Wallace Hopper, 555 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

Interesting Program Planned by League Of Women Voters

Besides the addresses to be given by Miss Minnie J. Nielson and Mrs. J. R. Parkes, regional secretary of the League of Women Voters at the meeting Monday evening of the local unit of the League, at the high school auditorium, a musical program has been arranged by the committee in charge. Mrs. Frank Barnes and Mrs. J. L. Bankston will each sing a solo, and there will be chorus singing led by Mrs. Barnes. The subject of Miss Nielson's talk, the history of political parties to the present time, will be of special interest in view of the fact that this is a campaign year, with third parties playing a prominent part. It is expected that Mrs. Parkes, who is known to many of the women through her organization work this spring, will have a worthwhile message, as she has just come from Minneapolis, where the League is very active.

Both men and women of all parties are invited to attend the meeting, which will begin at 8 o'clock. There are no charges. The program committee, with Mrs. Overt Olson as chairman, assisted by Mrs. Benton Baker, and Mrs. George Welch, has made plans for a series of meetings to be held this fall; the date of the next meeting will be announced on Monday. Mrs. Parkes is expected to arrive in Bismarck to spend Sunday.

MY BEAUTY

IS ALL DUE TO BEAUTY HELPS
By Edna Wallace Hopper

I was a plain girl with little distinction. I made myself a famous beauty. Now, after 35 years as a stage star, I remain a beauty still. The thousands who see me daily on the stage know that I look 19.

When I was a girl, my rich mother took me on a world-wide search for the supreme beauty helps. Those helps made me famous. Since then I have kept in touch with every new discovery. I have made many trips to France. So what I was and what I am are due to scientific help.

Now women have convinced me that I should share these helps with others. Millions of girls and women want what I have gained. So I have combined all the helps I have discovered in four preparations, with 52 ingredients. And I have arranged so that all druggists and toilet counters offer them to all who wish.

One is a liquid cleanser which I call my Facial Youth. Lucie Lantelme, the famous Parisian beauty, first told me what it did. Now great beauty experts the world over are advising this formula. No other cleanser which man has discovered does what this cleanser does.

My Facial Youth contains no animal, no vegetable fat. It cannot irritate any way assimilate with the skin. It simply cleans the depths, then dries. All the grime, dead skin and clogging matter comes out with it.

That is the first beauty essential—an utterly clean skin. But I never dreamed what a clean skin meant until I found this Facial Youth.

Now Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. The cost is 75c. Write me for my Beauty Book and I'll send with it something else to please you. Edna Wallace Hopper, 586 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

Helen Ferguson plays the heroine. In addition to the thrills and the laughs there are several big scenes of a novel and artistic nature where Monty and Miss Ferguson offer some decidedly delightful terpsichorean features. Herman C. Kaymuker directed "Racing Luck." At the Capitol theatre tonight.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

HENTSCH
German militarists have a new goat. They're blaming Colonel Hentsch, member of their general staff in 1914, for ordering the retreat that lost the Battle of the Marne and shortcircuited what might have been a speedy winning of the war.

What really lost Germany the war, was the fallacy of the thing she fought for. In a titanic human upheaval like the World War, Providence has a hand in the result and permits no error in the decision. Militarism, rather than Germany, lost the war. Time will prove this. Militarism seems very much alive now, but it's like a chicken after its head is chopped off.

FORMS OF WEALTH

The "principal forms of wealth" in Pennsylvania total about three times as big as the wealth of the much larger state, Texas. This is the latest estimate by Uncle Sam.

Texas, farmed intensively, could support the population of the whole world, many experts claim. Its natural resources, as yet barely scratched, are fabulously profuse—undoubtedly many times greater than Pennsylvania's.

Pennsylvania is ranked higher because it has had the population to produce and accumulate. Man-power, in the last analysis, is the greatest form of wealth—in many ways the only.

GAMBLING

Almost 164 million shares of stock changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange between the first of the year and Sept. 1. That's at the rate of over 240 million shares a year, and a good many observers are alarmed at the "gambling craze."

If they will consult old newspaper files, they will find that stock trading was on even a bigger scale in the years 1905 and 1906 and even as far back as 1901. Since the dollar in those years bought twice as much as now, there really was more than twice as much speculation as in 1924.

FATAL ACCIDENTS

Fatal auto accidents have increased by half in five years. This is due, however, not to increased carelessness, but to the larger number of machines in use. The element of danger accompanying the average car is slowly but surely growing less. All this is the result of safety-first campaigns and more intelligent handling of traffic. We've made a good start in this direction, but there's still a long way to go.

Accidents, almost without exception, originate in someone's carelessness.

GAMBLERS

Fifteen and 20 years ago, on the New York Stock Exchange, speculation centered in railroad securities. Roughly, two shares of railroad stocks were sold for every industrial share that changed hands.

Speculation has shifted to industrial securities. In the first eight months of 1924, four industrial stocks were bought and sold for every railroad stock "traded."

Quite a revolution in gambling—a shift from transportation to production as the stakes.

NEAR-INSANE

Experts claim 200,000 people in New York city are "on the border line between sanity and madness." If you know New York, you'll comment that the estimate is too low.

On a population basis, there must be at least a couple of millions of such borderline cases in the whole country. And the craziest ones are not locked up. Their votes count as much as the ballots of the intelligent. Democracy is not without its handicaps. Sensible mentality tests would be a wise safeguard at the polls.

SLAVE

The average bricklayer now handles 500 bricks a day, employers estimate. Invading their industry is an electric machine that lays 1200 bricks an hour. The three men operating it do the work of 20 masons.

This situation gives you an almost clairvoyant picture of the future that lies ahead in every basic industry. "Skilled labor" of future generations will be skilled machine operators.

PIPES

Suppose an enemy fleet discovered our navy and began to bombard New York City. Presto! Pipe lines are thrown open, relays of pumping stations start oil flowing from Texas or Wyoming. The soil spreads rapidly, is set afire, soon the ocean is blazing for 100 miles out. Quite possible.

The oil industry has a network of nearly 83,000 miles of pipe lines underground in 23 states.

TAX

New York state collected 25 million dollars income taxes from its residents in 1923. New York City gets nearly half. State income tax is spreading.

Income taxes levied by cities may come later. Money will have to be raised some way. Municipalities in most cases are dangerously close to the saturation point or limit in mortgaging the future.

SPIRITUAL

The growth of materialism has far outdistanced the mental and spiritual development of man, warns Sir Mary Muspratt, the celebrated chemist. Strange words from a scientist. But he is right.

Nearly all of what we consider as economic and social problems are really spiritual problems. No solution, as long as we deal with material effects instead of spiritual causes.

A baby grand cost more than a grand baby. Some say it sounds better and some say it doesn't.

AMERICAN WRITERS IN RUSSIA

(Maurice G. Hindus, in Saturday Review of Literature)

The Russian has abandoned his old literary gods for new ones, and of these the ones that are especially enjoyed are, curiously enough, Americans. There are four American authors who are the idols of the Russian reading public now. They are America's ambassadors in Russia, destined in my opinion, to wield a most profound influence over Russian social and literary life than any official American that has ever been sent from Washington to Petrograd.

It is easy enough to guess who one of these authors is. Jack London has always been a favorite in Russia. He still is, though not as much as he was in the day when I attended school in a Russian village. The school children do not read him as much as they once did.

It is easier still to surmise who another one is. It is as natural for the Russian to take to Upton Sinclair as it is for the American to take to Gene Stratton-Porter. Both strike at a responsive chord in national character. It is a backward Russian proletarian who has not read and grown excited over Jimmie Higgins and "The Jungle." In my recent wanderings in European Russia whenever I called upon editors of provincial journals one of the questions I was always sure of being asked was whether I knew Upton Sinclair.

Communists took it for granted that he was a member of the party. They talked of him as "our Sinclair." If it is easy to understand the appeal that Jack London and Upton Sinclair make to the present-day Russian reading public, it is quite baffling to explain the remarkable vogue of O. Henry. What is there in him that can stir a revolutionary people? What inspiration can the apostles of the so-called proletarian culture or the Russian masses draw from him? He has no message for the revolutionary populace. Not one of his stories has the flamboyant class appeal that the tales of London's or Sinclair's latest possession have.

True, he has written of common folk burdened with packs of everyday worries and troubles. But so has Chekhov, so has Gorky, so has many another illustrious Russian writer. And Gorky is ever the passionate rebel. And Chekhov, too, manages to squeeze a goodly portion of biting dissent into his pages. But O. Henry at best only ripples with good-humored protest. Yet Gorky and Chekhov are pushed into the background and O. Henry is elevated to a high pedestal.

The most surprising literary phenomenon in Russia is not the popularity of O. Henry or Sinclair or London, but of an American author who has not the slightest affinity with any of these men, and who has not the faintest trace of a message of social protest. Edgar Rice Burroughs is the rage from one end of the country to the other. Anybody who reads anything reads the Tarzan stories—soldiers, proletarians, peasants, intellectuals. State and private publishing houses are keeping their presses hot churning out edition after edition of the Tarzan tales, which are snatched up as soon as they are placed on the market.

While on a train once from Moscow to Nizhny-Novgorod, I became acquainted with a salesman from one of the leading private publishing houses who was on his way to the big fair to sell books. He unpacked his case and showed me his "samples," quite an assortment of publications on engineering, hygiene, agriculture, chemistry, social problems, and then pointing to a copy of Tarzan of the Apes, he said: "I'll sell more of this than of all the others put together." I have not the least doubt but he did. I do not recall a single bookshop in any of the cities I visited or a single newsstand at any of the railroad stations but had a prominent display of the Tarzan books.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Lands alive, gracious me on us!" exclaimed the Sour Old Woman when she lifted the board in her kitchen floor and peeped down into her cellar. "The Twins and the Sand Man have escaped and taken the magic sand with them. They must have had magic along and I never knew it."

"But suddenly she heard a snore and upon looking more closely didn't see the Sand Man himself with his head on a sack of potatoes, fast asleep."

"Humph!" said the Sour Old Woman. "He must have used some of his own sleepy sand for snuff. But the sand's gone, that's sure. Sand Man or no Sand Man—and now all the babies will get their naps. Won't Tweeknose be cross, though, after me promising to help him out."

The Sour Old Woman left the Sand Man sleeping and went to her front door under the water-fall. She caught some of the water in a cup and sprinkling some drops on her door-sill she said a charm. "Eena Meena, quickly come. And see the harm the Twins have done."

Instantly there stood Eena Meena the magician, in his flowing robes, his nose making a bow to his chin and his chin making a curtsy to his nose.

"What wouldst?" said he. "You have summoned me with the magic cup that I gave you on your thousand birthday."

The Battle Rages

You, dear Ruth, have probably gone over all this phase of married life from another angle; yet it could not seem so terribly bad to you, for at least you have married again. You deserve everything now that life can give to you, and I sincerely hope you will have it.

You were not such a baby about it all as I have been. You kept all your unhappiness to yourself. I remember the only time you ever said anything to me about Harry was the time he came into the restaurant with that woman he ran away with finally. It was the beginning of the end, wasn't it?

Isn't it strange, dear, that we never know just when the beginning of the end begins? Perhaps it's just as well. You would have been even more unhappy than you were if you had known it then.

Another one of my problems just now is Alice. You remember I told you Karl wanted me to write her an invitation to come home. I can't do that, but I am going to have mother do it. I do not feel I can ever be the same to Alice. If she were not my sister I am certain I should never speak to her again. In fact, I should not do so anyway if it were not for mother and father.

I am not sure whether I want her to come back before John goes. He will say something to her that will precipitate a terrible quarrel. Yet I wish Alice could be made to tell John all about the pearls. I think everything would be all right, as far as those troublesome old beads are concerned.

Of course there is still the shop, the dear little lingerie shop that has given us so much joy. What are we going to do with that? However, we can let that wait until I get home.

I've taken up this entire letter with telling you my troubles, yet I haven't spoken to you of the most terrible one of all, the thing that hangs over me like a pall and keeps me from looking at my other troubles with any degree of sanity, for all these other troubles I am banking on time. He is such a beneficial old fellow he usually brings things out all right in the end; but once in a while even he cannot make the two ends match, particularly if one makes a mistake in making up one's account of debit and credit.

I said something of this kind to dad the other day, and he told me a story of an old man who kept a general store in the place where he was born, who kept his accounts in a unique way and never answered any letters. At last his affairs got in such shape that he had to call in an expert who brought him to task for it and explained to him that was the reason his affairs were mixed up.

He said he didn't think that was possible, for he had found through a long life that if you kept letters long enough, very few of them needed an answer. It was only another way of saying, my dear, that if one has patience, time will give you the right perspective on all things.

In looking over the man's accounts, the expert accountant brought him up short one day because in going over his books he had found a man's name and nothing beside it except a great, round O.

"What is this?" he asked. After looking at it a few moments, the man said: "Mr. Blank owes me a cheese."

PATH OF LEAST RESISTANCE

By Albert Apple

Electricity follows the path of least resistance. So does falling water, rushing back to its source, the sea.

So does the agile mercury from a broken thermometer, obeying gravity by darting down to the lowest level it can reach.

Man, too, obeys this natural law—follows the path of least resistance.

In other words, man inclines to the easiest way.

While it is natural for man to follow the easiest way, his progress comes by taking the more difficult roads or paths. Progress is not unnatural. But nature makes us pay the price.

We never get anywhere by following the easiest way.

It is easier to sleep on the ground, exposed to the weather. But man, beginning with his first crude huts, on to the luxurious skyscraper apartment house of the modern city, has taken the more difficult way—knowing that effort's reward is worth its price. The comfortable home is well worth the energy expended in getting it and in maintaining it.

Work is not the pleasantest thing in the world, despite the Big Talk of the platitudes—most of which are written by lazy dawdlers. The philosopher who urges mankind to toil is rarely energetic himself. But that does not lessen the truth and wisdom of his teachings.

Work is not the most enjoyable way of putting in our time. It certainly is not the easiest way—the path of least resistance. Yet we all know that work is what moves us ahead—brings us our necessities and comforts.

Men are resigned to their lot and are not following the line of least resistance—when they work at their daily tasks. But when work is over and man relaxes, he slips into the easiest way.

Particularly in his reading matter. He drifts through the entertaining, recreational news—scandal, crime, the unusual. These are the easiest ways—requiring no brain effort. Too bad, that political news and speeches require thought and, accordingly, get little of the attention they deserve. Yet if people every four years gave a bit more thought to national politics, it might lead to easier ways in their job of making a living.

It's a mistake to kid national politics. Admittedly a dry subject, it is really a prizefight in which prices and living conditions are to large extent determined for the coming four years.

New York, Sept. 26.—The most enlightening writer on New York society, its doing and undoings comes from Philadelphia.

For more than 10 years he has been mingling with the select, and telling his findings via newspapers. He is Maury Paul, born in society himself, his mother a Biddle and his father a Paul. He is the only sure blooded society reporter in the big city.

As a young man in the banking business in Philadelphia, he became incensed with the manner in which the doings of society were chronicled. He appealed to an editor and in response to a challenge became a society writer.

Believing that people were not interested particularly in the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Jones gave a dinner, he worked on the theory that people were interested in just what type plate Mr. Jones threw at the misbegotten New York and boast of it in a superior manner—but they all have yearnings for the West, the open spaces where they are sure Indians fight with tomahawks.

Skirts are getting shorter. Just now they are 11 inches from the sidewalk and will be higher within a few weeks according to fashion's decrees. The transition period from the long, flowing garments to the shorter, strictly tailored models, will be slow, however, as Fifth Avenue is bearing evidence. The shorter skirts are still in the minority.

Then Paul began to study New York's family tree, much as one would study law, medicine or boiler-making.

"The public has a misconception of society," he says, "Society does not want publicity and society people do not hire press agents. In fact society shuns public mention and it is the most difficult news to gather." In all the years Paul has been writing about society he never has used his own name. He has written under the names "Dolly Madison" and "Cholly Knickerbocker."

FABLES ON HEALTH

SOME KITCHEN HINTS

Keeping the pantry and kitchen in sanitary condition was another problem Mollie Jones took upon herself when the hygiene course was started at her school.

The Jones kitchen was a bit old-fashioned without the tiled floors and to-date place.

Food chambers should be closely watched. They should frequently be washed with and scrubbed with hot soapuds. Use a brush. A few drops of ammonia in the water will help. Clean the ice box thoroughly and frequently. Do this when the ice is low. Hot, soapy water should be used on the ice racks. The ice chamber should be particularly well scrubbed. The waste pipe should be removed and boiling water poured through it.

The pantry should be most carefully watched to see that no fruits or vegetables are rotting and that no foods are giving forth a bad odor. Keep the shelves carefully washed and disinfected, for it is from here that the food for the table comes and no chance of contamination should be taken.

MANDAN NEWS

MAY CHANGE PRECINCTS
Plans to request the Morton county board of commissioners to create a new voting precinct in the city of Mandan, were approved by the board of city commissioners at the regular meeting.

The first, fourth and fifth wards will remain the same as at present, it was indicated, the city commissioners recommending that three wards be made of the present second and third wards. This redistricting would reduce the voting strength of the second ward by a small number and cut more than a third of the voting strength from the third ward's present registration of more than 800.

WINS ELKS PRIZE
Miss Ruth Wilder of Mandan has been awarded the first prize of $50 in the "Mother" essay contest as conducted by the North Dakota State Elks association according to an announcement made today by H. K. Jensen, president of the state organization.

The local girl won the first prize in the contest conducted by Mandan Lodge No. 1256 B. P. O. Elks and her essay was entered in competition with the prize winners from the nine other lodges of the state. Judges were Dr. S. T. May, president of the Dickinson normal, Judge A. M. Christensen of the North Dakota supreme court and L. F. Crawford, state historian.

GIANTS NEAR CLINCHING OF LEAGUE HONOR

Victory Over Pittsburgh Yesterday Improved Giants' Position

New York, Sept. 26.—The Giants eliminated Pittsburgh from the National League race yesterday and need to win only two of their three remaining games with Philadelphia to clinch the pennant.

There were no games scheduled in the American League, where Washington maintains a two game lead over the Yankees and to clinch the pennant need to win three of their final four games with Boston.

Brooklyn did not play yesterday and the Giants increased their lead to one and one-half contests over the Robins, who even by taking their two remaining games with Boston, can win the flag only if the Giants lose their three with the Phillies.

McGraw's team can be the Brooklyn by winning one of the three.

YANKS WON BY BETTER HITTING AND PITCHING

1923 Series Was Third Successive Battle Between Yankees and Giants

New York, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—Superior pitching and batting enabled the New York Yankees to turn back their metropolitan rivals, the Giants, in their third successive world's series battle last season. After failing to win the previous two years, Miller Huggins' all-star twinning corps and formidable attack, centered around Babe Ruth, swept to a sensational victory, while McGraw's machine crumbled.

The Giants held their own for the first four games, due to the sensational home run hitting of the veteran Casey Stengel whose circuit clouts were the deciding factors in two games. But the Yankees turned the series into a rout in the last two games, the climax coming in the sixth game, when, after a last gallant stand, Art Nehf, southern star of the Giants, collapsed and the National Leaguers surrendered their crown.

Herb Pennock, portside ace of the Yankees, was the pitching star, with two victories to his credit. Joe Bush and Bob Shawkey were credited with the others for the Yankees while Ryan and Nehf gained the Giant triumphs. The best twirling performance was that of Sam Jones, who held the Giants to four hits in the third game but lost because one of these was a homer by Stengel, the only score of the game, while the Yankees were unable to make effective use of their six blows off Nehf.

The Yankees wide margin at the end was shown by their team hitting mark of .293 as compared with .234 of the Giants.

GOPHERS LACK ENDS AND BACKFIELD MEN

Minnesota Situation as Spaulding Opens Third and Final Year Under Present Contract

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—A line in fact from tackle to tackle but without the services of experienced ends, including the great Martineau—that is the situation at the University of Minnesota as Coach Bill Spaulding opens his third and final year under his present contract as football mentor.

With the 1923 machine built around Earl Martineau, flashy halfback of all-American fame, the Gopher grid is working out an entirely new set of plans for the heavy program of games, the most pretentious schedules in the recent history of Minnesota.

Fourteen "M" men, 13 of them veterans of the 1923 squad, and the other a 1922 casualty reported when he Big Ten practice began September 15. This in addition to some promising young material from Minnesota high schools.

Eight hard games in a row—one game a week—is the program for the 1924 Minnesota eleven. Six of these, including two scheduled Western conference games, will be played in Minnesota's new $700,000 stadium which has a seating capacity of 55,000 persons.

Minnesota plays away-from-home games with Iowa and Wisconsin, but Michigan and Illinois will visit the new Gopher stadium which will be dedicated at the Illinois game, November 15.

North Dakota comes here October 4 for the first game, and the last game will be with Vanderbilt here November 25. Meanwhile the Gophers will sandwich in contests with Ames and the Haskell Indians.

Malcom Graham, youthful quarterback who showed to good advantage last year until injured at the Michigan game, placed him on the hospital list has overcome scholastic difficulties by attending summer school and Minnesota fans expect his playing to go far toward plugging the gap left by the graduation of Martineau.

MANY CROWS ARE SLAIN

Game and Fish Commission Seeks Complete Report

E. T. Judd, Cando, state game and fish commissioner, has issued a request to gun clubs, sportsmen's associations and all other organizations created or handed together for the purpose of destroying the crow, for a report on the number of crows and eggs destroyed. In a statement he says:

"I would greatly appreciate a report showing the number of crows and their eggs destroyed as for instance, it is reported that a contest at Kindred, North Dakota, with 100 men and boys accounted for the killing of 11,000 crows, counting an egg as a crow. At Devils Lake, over 9,000 were destroyed. At the little town of St. John, the club assessed its members and paid outsiders for over 2,000 besides accounting for 1,000 or more by its members.

"That this was good work was shown by the security of native raised birds throughout the State during the summer time. At the present time, many large flocks are congregating along the northern border and elsewhere. Complaints in the grain fields after the grain is cut and shocked."

RAIN HALTS N. D. THRESHING

Possible Snow Listed in The Weather Bureau Report

Rain which again will delay threshing fell in many places in North Dakota last night and was reported today. The weather bureau report today, for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a. m. today, showed rain in the extreme northeastern part of the state where threshing already has been delayed considerably.

Rainfall for the 24-hour period is shown as follows: Amelia .20; Bismarck .03; Bottineau .20; Devils Lake .06; Fessenden .03; Jamestown .61; Langdon .12; Minot .15; Napoleon .16; Pembina .85; Williston .04.

The weather bureau's report also indicates rain or possibly snow tonight, with Saturday mostly fair.

Forks Threshers Are Delayed

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 26.—Rain yesterday and today will delay threshing from three to four days in localities in the northeastern part of North Dakota. In the immediate vicinity of Grand Forks work is nearly complete but farther north much remains to be done.

She's just won the highest position there for herself, being elected president of the Student Government Association and making Phi Beta Kappa.

"LITTLE JESSIE JAMES" GOES IN FOR MERRIMENT, NOT BANDITRY, HERE

The producers of "Little Jessie James," the musical comedy which played at the Auditorium last night, wanted it to be different. Perhaps that's why they chose the name. It doesn't sound as if the plot would be built around a Cinderella and her Prince Charming, and it wasn't. The action was frankly farcical, the dialogue bright in spots, the action breezy and the producers refused to overwork their one sugary ballad, "I Love You."

"Little Jessie James" isn't a big show, and it had no stars with it. It enjoyed a fairly long run in the east but didn't break any records, and it probably won't on tour. But apparently it did give the audience eye and ear entertainment for a bit over two hours that left most of them joyful and their feet tingling.

The show's appearance here is likely to start trouble for eastern producers. North Dakotans and others may turn from signing petitions for politicians to petitioning producers to send an orchestra called "A Paul Whiteman Band" with every show. There were twelve in the James Boys' orchestra with the show, and they furnished tunefulness and dash in the music. They proved Paul Whiteman is the King of Jazzland. The orchestra also proved by predictions made long ago that jazz music, like bobbed-hair, would pass out, never materialized.

There were no bandits or wild west in the show. "Little Jessie James" was just a bit of femininity from Oskaloosa, Kansas, who breezed into New York, and got what she wanted, using her eyes and her smile to do it. Jack Kane as "Tommy Tinker," with Myrtle Miller as "Juliet," team on the farce comedy, with Lee Kohnstun an acceptable character comedian. The chorus could dance. The comedy which ran through the show revolved around the difficulties of keeping an apartment in New York while the occupant hoped to marry a good income tax return. Patricia O'Dare was the bundle of pep that was a

DAWES SPEAKS AT ST. CLOUD

Candidate for Vice-President Continues Gopher Tour

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—(By the A. P.)—Charles G. Dawes, Republican candidate for Vice-President, conferred with state leaders of his party and rested here today before turning northward on his three-day swing through Minnesota.

Leaving here shortly before noon Mr. Dawes made a rear platform speech at Anoka at 12:10 p. m. and then departed for St. Cloud at 1:30 p. m. where he will speak tonight in the Armory.

The day as planned was the least strenuous of the Republican vice-presidential nominee's Minnesota tour and it was his purpose to obtain as much rest as possible after yesterday's vigorous campaigning on the return trip to Chicago.

With ROOSEVELT IN AFRICA

by W. Robert Foran

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Robert Foran, newspaper correspondent, accompanies the Theodore Roosevelt expedition into Africa in 1908. They arrive at Mombasa, the "gateway of British East Africa," and then make the railroad journey to their first camp on the game-crowded Kapiti Plains. With Colonel Roosevelt are his son, Kermit, and three scientific members of his staff—Major Edgar A. Mearns, Edmund Heller and J. Allen Loring.

After a wonderfully successful shooting trip in the Sotik country, the expedition camps for more hunting at a farm called Sigal-Sal. Going next to Naivasha, the party meets with more good sport. At Nairobi during a week, Roosevelt is paid almost every conceivable honor. Now he is giving the main address at the Railroad Institute at Nairobi, expressing his opinion of the country and its future prospects.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
"It seems to me that what is most needed is plenty of men who know the business of farming and have the flexibility of mind necessary to adapt themselves to and do well in a new country. The next need is for men who, although not farmers, will work until they become such."

"Finally, the scientific farmer from the old country and the pioneer who has actually spent his life in the new country—especially the pioneer, British or Dutch, from South Africa—remember that each is a very short-sighted person if he cannot learn something from the other, and cannot recognize the good in the other. The pioneer can profit immensely from the government farms, from the experience of men who by the use of trained modern knowledge, and modern methods and instruments, make farming a paying success, and the scientific farmer from the old world, with his highly specialized training, needs to remember that, in the harsh conditions under which much of the life of a new country is led, only the rugged men, who have actually grown up facing similar conditions, are fit to tame the country so that others can come in after them and dwell beside them. Each of the two types has need of the other, and can profit greatly by working in hearty accord with one another."

"I say again, stand by each other. Remember that time spent in back-biting is waste of time. Work all of you heartily together so that you may soon do what you will ultimately do—turn this region into a great and prosperous White Man's country."

CHAPTER XV
Roosevelt's Return to Naivasha
On the morning of Wednesday, August 4, Colonel Roosevelt, Kermit, Dawson and myself left Nairobi for Naivasha.

We traveled by special train, leaving at 9 o'clock in the morning, and were to stop en route at Kijabe, American Mission. Colonel Roosevelt had promised to lay the foundation stone of the new European children's school at the Mission.

There was a tremendous crowd at the Nairobi railroad depot to see Colonel Roosevelt leave. On the platform a number of the leading officials and settlers pressed around Roosevelt and thanked him very sincerely for what he had said in his speech at the banquet on the previous evening.

"It will make a most enormous difference to the country's future," remarked Lord Delamere to Roosevelt. "Even the most optimistic had not dared to hope for such a splendid vindication of the possibilities of this tropical country from your lips."

How highly his speech was prized can be proved by the fact that the East African Colonists' Association and the Nairobi Chamber of Commerce resolved, by an overwhelming majority, to print and distribute to members of the House of Commons and the House of Lords some 2,000 copies of the speech. This is surely a true indication of the trend of local popular opinion in regard to the subject matter of Colonel Roosevelt's speech.

On the way up to Kijabe, the Roosevelt occupied the usual seat in front of the engine, while Dawson and I occasionally rode beside them. The day was dull and threatening, but luckily the rain held off. However, the fact that the sun was shrouded by heavy clouds made the train journey wonderfully cool.

The Rev. Mr. Hulbert met Roosevelt on our arrival at Kijabe, and conducted him up the road from the railroad depot, through forest-clad hills, to the site of the new Mission school. A large number of American missionaries, their wives and children were already gathered around the site. The new building was to be constructed out of red bricks, which were made at the Mission.

The foundation stone, which Colonel Roosevelt was to lay in position was a handsome slab of white-dressed stone. It was suspended above the foundation by a temporary derrick. No time was wasted over the ceremony, as Colonel Roosevelt was anxious to get back to Naivasha as quickly as possible so as to hasten on the preparations for the elephant hunt to the Nyeri and Fort Hall districts.

Following the brief introductory remarks by Dr. Hulbert, Colonel Roosevelt performed the ceremony, and then made a brief address to the missionaries.

"I am glad to have had the chance," he said, "of being present today to assist in laying the foundation stone of a building which I believe will be associated with far-reaching and permanent good to the people of East Africa."

"Your primary work is among the natives, and I am particularly pleased that you have devoted yourganized by the county extension agents and are being operated with their cooperation, according to A. M. Challey, dairy specialist at the North Dakota Agricultural college.

Eleven of these associations have been formed, two each in Barnes, Bottineau and Pierce counties, and one each in Benson, Cass, Eddy, Grand Forks and Ramsey. Membership includes from 5 to 14 farmers, and the herds average around 15 milking cows, making a total of more than one thousand cows involved.

"Money can be lost in dairying almost as fast as in most other farm activities," declares Mr. Challey, "and nobody wants to milk cows for a pastime. The average dairy cow in North Dakota produces about 137 pounds of butterfat, and a herd of cows which averages below this figure is almost sure to return a loss to the owner."

A Little Change in Sweethearts

By ELLA SAUNDERS

Big Dan Morgan was back from the West after a five years' absence, and Milly was watching him in terror all through his visit. Was this the man she had practically engaged herself to?

And he had come back as poor as he had gone. And he looked twenty years his senior. Milly had been only eighteen when Big Dan went away, and now she was twenty-three, and there was Jim.

What a fool to expect her to have been true to him! And the impudence of him, coming back penniless!

"I can't marry him, Auntie, I can't," sobbed the girl when he had gone.

Aunt Miriam, who was not far from forty, a little faded, gentle woman, sighed. She knew the worth of Big Dan's heart. But what was the use of trying to explain that to her niece—flighty little Milly, whose head was turned by anything masculine that appeared to come her way?

"He's old, and he's a failure, a horrible failure," sobbed Milly. "And Jim's making good as quick as he can. And he wants to marry me, o there you are!"

Big Dan came every evening, and Milly grew harder and colder. But Jim didn't seem to care. "The West hasn't improved him," she told her aunt, jeeringly.

"Milly, dear, if you really feel that way you ought to tell him," her aunt protested. "It's easy to say, but it's hard to do. You must play fair with him."

"You tell him," said Milly. "Why, child, what an idea!" exclaimed Aunt Miriam, much shocked.

"I'm not going to." "But he's leaving for the West again in a few weeks, and you must—must have it settled one way or the other."

"Well, it will be the other, then," said Milly. "And I'm not going to see him when he comes here on Saturday."

Dan Morgan had gone away for a few days and had intimated that on his return he would have important news for them.

No argument of her aunt's could shake the girl's resolution, and it was with desperate anxiety that Miss Miriam waited Big Dan's arrival on the Saturday evening.

She knew the tenderness of heart that underlay her rough exterior, and she dreaded the shock that her news would give him.

Big Dan breezed in and shook hands with her. "Where's Milly?" he asked.

"She's had to go out," faltered Miss Miriam. "She was so sorry—No, she wasn't sorry," she added, with a sudden burst of decision. "I'm going to tell you the truth, because she won't tell you herself. She's in love with another fellow. She won't marry him."

Big Dan stood perfectly silent in front of her. "How was he taking it?" she asked. "He's taking it all right. If she gauged Big Dan Morgan aright the shock would nearly kill him."

Or worse. It would destroy his faith in womanhood, that womanhood she believed in so sincerely. Big Dan's voice broke on her ears. "That's too bad, Miss Miriam," he said. "I had some good news for her. I've sold that gold mine I was telling about for a million dollars. I'm to be manager of the company, and I'm starting West tomorrow."

Miss Miriam looked up. Looked up incredulously, for Big Dan stood there actually smiling.

"I guess it's not such bad news to me as you suppose, Miss Miriam," he said. "I kind of guessed which way the wind was blowing. And besides, I've got my own reasons to be glad. There's another in my mind—has been for ever so long. Yes, I surely am glad of the news that you've told me today."

Suddenly his arm slid around Miss Miriam's waist.

"It's you I want," he said. "I want you to come West with me tomorrow. I can't tell you how happy I'll be if you will. Do you think you can?"

"Oh, I don't know what to say," sobbed Miss Miriam. "I'll tell you," smiled Big Dan. (© 1924 Western Newspaper Union)

Victory Over Pittsburgh Yesterday Improved Giants' Position

New York, Sept. 25.—The Giants clinched Pittsburgh from the National League race yesterday and need to win only two of their three remaining games with Philadelphia to clinch the pennant.

There were no games scheduled in the American League where Washington maintains a two game lead over the Yankees and to clinch the pennant need to win three of their final four games with Boston even if New York cleans up its four with the fast traveling Athletics.

Brooklyn is idle. Brooklyn did not play yesterday and the Giants moved their lead to one and one-half games over the Boston Braves by taking their two remaining games with Boston, team with the flag only if the Giants lose their three with the Phillies. McGraw's team can be Brooklyn by winning one of the three.

YANKS WON BY BETTER HITTING AND PITCHING

1923 Series Was Third Successive Battle Between Yankees and Giants

New York, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—Superior pitching and batting enabled the New York Yankees to turn back their metropolitan rivals, the Giants, in their third successive world's series battle last season. After failing dismally the previous two years, Miller Huggins' all star twirling corps and formidable attack, centered around Babe Ruth, swept in a sensational victory, while McGraw's machine crumbled.

The Giants held their own for the first four games due to the sensational home run hitting of the veteran Casey Stengel whose circuit courts were the deciding factors in two games. But the Yankees turned the series into a rout in the last two games, the climax coming in the sixth game when, after a last tallant stand, Art Nehf, southpaw star of the Giants, collapsed and the National League's surrendered their "robin."

Herb Pennock, portside ace of the Yankees, was the pitching star, with two victories to his credit. Joe Bush and Bob Shawkey were credited with one each for the Yankees while Ryan and Nehf gained the Giant triumphs. The best twirling performance was that of Sam Jones, who held the Giants to four hits in his third game but lost because one of them was a home run by Stengel, he only score of the game, while the Yankees were unable to make effective use of their six bows off Nehf.

The Yankees wide margin at the end was shown by their team hitting mark of 294 as compared with 231 or the Giants.

GOPHERS LACK ENDS AND BACKFIELD MEN

Minnesota Situation as Spaulding Opens Third and Final Year Under Present Contract

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—A line intact from tackle to tackle but without the services of experienced ends, as well as star backfield men, including the great Martineau, that chiefly is the situation at the University of Minnesota as Coach Bill Spaulding opens his third and final year under his present contract as a full mentor.

With the 1923 machine built around Earl Martineau, flashy halfback of All-American fame, the Gopher grid chief is working out an entirely new set of plans for the heavy program of games, the most pretentious schedules in the recent history of Minnesota.

Fourteen "M" men, 13 of them veterans of the 1923 squad, and the other a 1922 casualty reported when he was Big Ten practice began September 15. This in addition to some promising young material from Minnesota high schools.

Eight hard games in a row—one game a week—is the program for the 1924 Minnesota eleven. Six of these, including two scheduled Western conference games, will be played in Minnesota's new $700,000 stadium which has a seating capacity of 25,000 persons.

Minnesota plays away-from-home games with Iowa and Wisconsin, but Michigan, and Illinois will visit the

New Gopher stadium which will be dedicated at the Illinois game, November 15.

North Dakota comes here October 4 for the first game, and the last game will be with Vanderbilt here November 25. Meanwhile the Gophers will sandwich in the Gophers with the Haskell Indians.

Alvin Graham, youthful quarterback who showed "to good advantage" last year until injuries at the Michigan game placed him on the hospital list has overcome scholastic difficulties by attending summer school and Minnesota fans expect his playing to go far toward plugging the gap left by the graduation of Martineau.

MANY CROWS ARE SLAIN

Game and Fish Commission Seeks Complete Report

E. T. Judd, Cando, state game and fish commissioner, has issued a request to gun clubs, sportsmen's associations and all other organizations created or banded together for the purpose of destroying the crow, for a report on the number of crows and eggs destroyed.

In a statement he says: "I would greatly appreciate a report showing the number of crows and their eggs destroyed for instance, it is reported that a contest at Kindred, North Dakota, with 100 men and boys accounted for the killing of 11,000 crows, counting an egg as a crow. At Devils Lake, over 9,000 were destroyed. At the little town of St. John, the club assessed its members and paid outsiders for over 2,000 besides accounting for 1,000 or more by its members."

"That this was good work was shown by the scarcity of native raised birds throughout the State during the summer time. At the present time, many large flocks are congregating along the northern border and elsewhere. Complaints are heard of their destructive work in the grain fields after the grain is cut and shocked."

The producers of "Little Jessie James," the musical comedy which played at the Auditorium last night, wanted it to be different. Perhaps that's why they chose the name. It doesn't sound as if the plot would be built around a Cinderella and her Prince charming, and it wasn't. The action was frankly farcical, the farce brought in snobs, the action breezy and the producers refused to overwork their one sugary ballad, "I Love You."

"Little Jessie James" isn't a big show, and it had no stars with it. It enjoyed a fairly long run in the east but didn't break any records, and it probably won't on tour. But apparently it did give the audience eye and ear entertainment for a bit over two hours that left most of them jocular and their feet tingling.

The show's appearance here is likely to start trouble for eastern producers. North Dakota and others may turn from signing petitions for politicians to petitioning producers to send an orchestra called "A Paul Whiteman Band" with every show. There were twelve in the James Boys' orchestra with the show, and they furnished tunefulness and dash in the music. They proved Paul Whiteman is the King of Jazzland.

The orchestra also proved by predilection how long ago that jazz music, like hotbed humor, would pass out, never to be materialized.

There were no bandits or wild west in the show. "Little Jessie James" was just a bit of femininity from Oklahoma, Kansas, who breezed into New York, and got what she wanted, a Jack Kane as "Tommy Tinker," with Myrtle Miller as "Juliet," team on the farce comedy, with Lee Kohlman an acceptable character comedian. The chorus could dance. The comedy which ran through the show, avoided around the difficulties of keeping an apartment in New York, while the occupant hoped to marry a good income tax return. possible snow listed in the weather bureau report

Rain which again will delay threshing fell in many places in North Dakota last night and was reported today. The weather bureau's report today, for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a. m. today, showed rain in the extreme northeastern part of the state where threshing already has been delayed considerably.

Rainfall for the 24-hour period is shown as follows: America 20; Bismarck .03; Bottineau .20; Devils Lake .06; Fessenden .03; Jamestown .15; Langdon .12; Minot .15; Napoleon .16; Pembina .35; Williston .04.

The weather bureau's report also indicates rain or possibly snow to night, with Saturday mostly fair.

Forks Threshers Are Delayed

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 26.—Rain yesterday and today will delay threshing from three to four days in most localities in the northeastern part of North Dakota. In the immediate vicinity of Grand Forks work is nearly complete but farther north much remains to be done.

Among the resources of the bank, however, are carried deposits to closed banks, loans to closed banks and receiver's certificates, proof of claim, totalling $2,351,763.16. This amount has increased slightly since the statement of March 14, 1924, when it was $2,346,428.52, additional closings of banks offsetting liquidation of some assets.

The bank shows loans to state industries, including $482,026.05 to be Home Builders' Association and $440,706.52 to the Mill and Elevator Association.

Deposits of the bank have decreased since the statement of March 15, due to the long period for withdrawals by public treasurers after the spring taxpaying. Deposits of public treasurers are shown to be $428,829.56 as compared to $9,065,021.47 on last March 15.

DAWES AVERS SOCIALISM IS A BIG ISSUE

Candidate in Minnesota Declares Campaign Is "A Call to the Colors"

St. Cloud, Minn., Sept. 26.—The issue presented by the LaFollette and Coolidge candidacies was declared to be "call to the colors" by Charles G. Dawes, President Coolidge's running mate, in a speech at Anoka, Minnesota, en route here for another night address.

Mr. Dawes reiterated that Senator LaFollette has raised the issue of preservation of the federal constitution and declared the voters of the country thereby had been given the choice of placing themselves on the side of the constitution under the American flag and under a man like President Coolidge who has got the guts to stand by it or going on to the stinking stand of socialism with the red flag.

Whaleback Believed Foundered with 28 Men Aboard

Cleveland, O., Sept. 26.—A hydro-plane, tugs and beach patrols were today added to the agencies being employed to find some trace of the whaleback freighter Clifton, now definitely believed to have foundered with her crew of 28 officers and men in the gale which swept Lake Huron Sunday night.

"We have abandoned virtually all hope for the safety of the Clifton and her crew," A. G. R. Schneider, general manager of the Progress Steamship Company, Cleveland owners, said. Schneider added, however, that officials of his company, as well as marine men, were unable to understand why if the Clifton did founder, wreckage or other evidences of the tragedy had not been tossed upon the shores or had not floated to the surface of the lake.

Carbondale, Ill., Sept. 26.—(By the A. P.)—Interest in the Illinois poison plot romance was shifted to this town today, where the southern Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was expected to make formal investigation of Rev. Lawrence M. Hight's part in the plot. The love plot resulted in the death of Mrs. Hight and Wilford Sweetin, whose wife the minister planned to marry. The conference sent two members to Nashville yesterday to obtain statements from the minister.

Rev. Hight, who a few days ago declined to surrender his ministerial credentials to C. C. Hall, district superintendent, offered to give them up last night to the committee.
